WILL ENTER KAMINA

By Associated Press.

London, August 26.—(Bulletin).—The allies will enter Kamina Thursday.

By Associated Press.

London, August 26.—“At last the British army is at grips with the Germans,” says the Ostend correspondent of the Daily Mail.

“It was a great moment when the British general staff with its men arrived. The inhabitants went mad with enthusiasm. ‘The British army has come to Belgium,’ exclaimed the townspeople gleefully. They had no difficulty in obtaining needed provisions. All requisitions were paid for in gold. The civil population was ordered to retire in the direction of France. The troops advanced in battle positions at 3 o’clock in the morning. At 4 o’clock eight German aeroplanes appeared. Thereupon a flock of British aeroplanes rose like birds to drive them away.

“Then the artillery began to talk and the air became thick with cannon powder. The great battle had begun. Forward went the infantry. Rifle fire and maxim fire added to the boom of the big guns. Sunrise mingled with the glow of burning forests and the flash of guns.

“This was Monday. The battle continued Tuesday and probably will continue for several days. The great battle which is now in full swing along the whole French, British and Belgian lines is really a series of linked battles forming what may well be the decisive engagement of western Europe. It is a supreme effort on the part of the Germans to break into France, an effort which, if stopped, must mean disaster to three-quarters of a million German soldiers. There seems to be no soldiers left to guard the German line of communication. All is being hazarded on the success or failure of this battle. The German advance has been rapid and steady. Their columns have averaged 20 miles a day since they reached Brussels.

The Daily Mail believes that the Germans will occupy Ostend for use later as a base of operation against England.

“The German movement against Ostend is of great importance and is dictated possibly by naval as well as military considerations,” says the paper.

“Ostend is only 66 miles off the British coast. If the Germans establish themselves there and bring up heavy artillery, they may render it a dangerous base of operations against England. Airships acting from it could watch the channel and the Thames and carry out raids against Great Britain.

Paris, Aug. 26.—The war office has issued the following official announcement:

"The commander in chief, requiring all available forces on the Meuse, has ordered the progressive abandonment of occupied territory. Muelhausen again has been evacuated. A new battle is in progress between Muelhausen, department of the Nord, and Donon, in central Vosges. On it hangs the fate of France. Operations in Alsace along the Rhine would take away troops upon which might depend victory. It is necessary that they all withdraw from Alsace temporarily in order to assure its final deliverance. It is a matter of hard necessity."

London, Aug. 26.—Emperor William was halted in his victorious march through Belgium by French, British and Belgian troops. The French and British held their lines west of Charleroi and Mons against repeated assaults. ## MAGIC IN GOLF.

It Looked Like an Impossible Putt, but Travis Mastered It.

"I once saw Walter J. Travis, the veteran, sink the most wonderful putt it has ever been my lot to witness," says Jerome D. Travers in the American Magazine.

"The occasion was a Metropolitan championship at Garden City, with Travis and Wilder of Boston in a hard match. Travis was four down and four to play, hanging on by a thin thread of hope. But Travis settled down and won the fifteenth and sixteenth holes, leaving himself only two down, with two holes left. He had to win both, of course, to even get a half. But his rally seemed to be final at the seventeenth hole, and those who had watched four to one against Wilder—one man I know had bet $200 to $50 on Travis—were looking on with sick expressions. For all Wilder needed was a half here to win the match. And after playing three shots he was only four feet from the cup. And Travis on his third shot was barely on the green, thirty feet away.

"The battle seemed to be over beyond any hope, for Travis was not only thirty feet away, but he had one of the trickiest and hardest greens on the course to putt over. And even if he made the putt the odds were that Wilder would also make his from that distance. Travis had no chance to try for a straight putt. There were two decided breaks in the slope of the green, one to the left and one to the right. And between these two mounded slopes there was a narrow gap between knolls. It was impossible to follow the line of this gap, because the cup was set back of a knoll to the left, blocking entrance in that direction.

"He had only one way to go, and that was to take the mounded slope to the right. The Old Man walked up to the cup and studied the line carefully from that angle. Then he walked slowly back, studying the lay of the ground along the line he must take. He had to figure all this tricky slope to the inch and to the inch for thirty feet. For any slight break off the right line would probably put him three or four feet away at the finish.

"After a careful survey he walked back to his putt and with a free tap sent the ball spinning along. It took the slope to the right, wound its way along this raised mound and, winding, turning, twisting, up slope and down slope, it broke in at exactly the right spot, about twenty-eight feet away, and it then plumped squarely into the center of the cup, taking its last run from a decided downhill spin where the green sloped off abruptly toward the hole. I've never seen another like it."

He made public a resume of the efforts of the combined departments in co-operation with the American diplomatic and consular officers abroad and the officials of the transatlantic steamship companies, which indicates that within six weeks every American in Europe desirous of returning to the United States may return here. ## Stammered to Himself.

To those who stutter or stammer let me suggest my personal cure. At about fourteen I was attacked by a bad habit of stammering and couldn't start a remark without it. The other boys laughed at me, and elders projected complicated cures. But the absurdity of the situation appealed to me. Why couldn't I say "I" at once without the preliminary stammer?

It was obviously necessary to stutter, often before saying "No." Well, why shouldn't I stutter to myself? The method was adopted. When a sentence had to be started the stammer was carried out in silence—if a dozen "n's" had to start a "No." And after a few days of deliberate speech, with the stammer done in silence, I was delivered entirely from the habit.—London Standard.

Japanese Child Jugglers.

Among the itinerant street entertainers in London are a number of tiny Japanese children, usually boys. They make their way into hotel and public house bars, saloons and restaurants and, producing a sheaf of knives from their pockets, suddenly begin juggling with them in the most expert manner, accompanying the performance with a monotonous singsong which seems to be inseparable from the exhibition. Being very small, they seldom depart without receiving a shower of coppers, to which they respond at the doorway with a little chant of thanksgiving. It is difficult to guess the age of Japanese children, but none of the tiny tots engaged in this business appear to be more than seven years old.

My friend vowed he would see them in—chancery before he paid that and struck it out.—London Chronicle.

A Kipling Anecdote.

The old postman at Westward Ho, near Bideford, in Devon, and the scene of "Stalky & Co.," is reported in T. P.'s London Weekly as telling an interesting anecdote of Rudyard Kipling, dating from the time when Kipling himself was a boy at school at Westward Ho. It appears that Beckwith, the aquatic expert, came to Westward Ho to give an exhibition from the pier, which was crowded with the usual summer sightseers and a fair sprinkling of boys from the school. After some evolutions in the water the swimmer commenced a series of diving performances, and it was after a sensational dive from the top of the pier that the spectators were amazed to see a chubby, stocky boy run to the edge of the pier and repeat the dive with all the mannerisms of the expert. Inquiry elicited the fact that the boy was named Kipling, and it is by this incident more than any other that the Bideford people remember the now famous author.

Possibilities of the Mind

There is an old saying: "Hanging is nothing when you get used to it."

Like all the old sayings that have survived the ages, there is a vast amount of truth in it. It is an extreme statement of the adaptability of the human mind to any condition. Once the mind is prepared for it, men go to death as to a banquet. There is nothing can terrify the human soul properly poised. It is the surprise of the moment; the horrifying aspect of the unusual that staggers and dismays. The savage red man, schooled in his mind to burn by inches and have his flesh torn from his bones, bit by bit, without so much as the movement of a facial muscle, denoting pain, would flee in uncontrollable terror at the discharge of a sky-rocket. Men and women of the highest culture faced the guillotine in the French revolution with a smile. The soldier in the fierce charge of battle with his comrades falling in death at every step, pushes forward without thought of fear. The worst that can befall him, he is already prepared to endure. The French women, who stood upon the guillotine without a tremor would have shrieked with fright if a mouse had appeared suddenly upon their parlor floor. And many a soldier who pushed recklessly into the ranks of death has shaken with fear at the sight of a fancied ghost. In the one case the mind was prepared and in the other it was thrown into confusion by the unexpected.

Napoleon, with his usual modesty, said that he never knew but one man other than himself, who possessed two o'clock in the morning courage. That is a disposition to meet death at once when awakened from a sound sleep without giving the mind time to prepare itself.

The uncertainty of tomorrow is what makes most men miserable. If they are poor, they fear that their family is going to starve if they get sick or disabled or die. If they are rich they fear that they may become poor, or be disgraced, or that a thousand disasters may befall them or those they love.

And in the far gloaming just a little farther than human mind can see, looms a devouring spectre, the terrible father of human distress—uncertainty. It is a poor man indeed who does not face the inevitable with serenity. But it takes a great soul to look calmly into the face of all the disasters that "may come".

We're Not Giving Children A Square Deal

By HELEN C. DWIGHT of National Child Labor Committee

UNDER existing child labor laws in the various states it is a PERILOUS THING FOR ANY CHILD TO BE BORN IN THIS COUNTRY OF POOR PARENTS because it is almost inevitable that such a child will not be given a chance to develop mentally and physically as nature intended, and the state will be to blame, though some states are kinder to poor children than others.

IF ONE OF UNCLE SAM'S CHILDREN IS BORN INTO A POOR FAMILY, EVEN A VERY POOR FAMILY, IN OHIO, WISCONSIN OR MASSACHUSETTS, HE WILL PROBABLY HAVE A FAIRLY NORMAL CHILDHOOD, RECEIVE SOME EDUCATION AND BE GIVEN THAT THING AMERICANS PRIZE—"A CHANCE." BUT HE WILL NOT HAVE THAT CHANCE IN EVERY STATE.

We like to believe that American children are a bit luckier than any other children just because they live in America, but the COLD FACTS ARE THAT IN A LARGE PART OF THE UNITED STATES THE CHILD OF POVERTY HAS NO CHANCE. We are not giving the children a square deal.

Austria Had to Act In Self Defense

By Dr. CONSTANTIN THEODOR DUMBA, Ambassador of Austria-Hungary to United States

THE KINGDOM OF SERBIA, ELATED BY ITS RECENT SUCCESS IN THE BALKAN WAR, WHICH NEARLY DOUBLED ITS POPULATION, INSTEAD OF DIRECTING ITS EFFORTS TOWARD HEALING THE WOUNDS INFLICTED ON MACEDONIA, WITH ITS BURNED VILLAGES AND DECIMATED POPULATION, COULD NOT OR WOULD NOT REFRAIN FROM KEEPING ALIVE THE AGITATION AGAINST THE INTEGRITY OF THE DUAL MONARCHY.

Austria had to clear up the situation once and forever. The question of keeping her southern provinces intact is a vital issue. SHE HAD TO ACT IN SELF DEFENSE. She wants no enlargement of territory and proved this during the last Balkan war, when it would have been easy for her to occupy all the territory now acquired by Serbia. AUSTRIA-HUNGARY REQUIRES GUARANTEES FOR THE FUTURE, WITHOUT WHICH THE PEACE IN THE BALKANS CANNOT BE MAINTAINED.

Poetry For Today

THE POOR LITTLE GUY.

While the legions are locked on the dead line,
While the dreadnoughts are glooming the seas,
While horrors of rumor and headline
Give a tang to an evening of ease,
Let us kneel in the dust of all faction.
Let us pray to the peace from on high
For a small unspectacular fraction—
The poor little guy!

In the fangs of the trangling wire
He slips in the slime of the dead;
He blinks at the spume of the fire
And the scream of the stream of the lead;
And yet—he knew nought of the plotting,
And nought can he profit thereby;
But his is the dying—and rotting—
The poor little guy!

Let us pray for his kine in the stable,
For his ass and his ox and his swine,
For his chair and his plate on the table,
For his cornfield and orchard and vine,
For the tilth where the women are plying,
For the bed where he never shall lie,
For the ache that is worse than the dying—
The poor little guy!

A pitiful pawn of Vienna,
Of Kaiser, of King or of Czar,
He is pushed to the pit of Gehenna,
To the slide of the great Abattoir.
He goes as the wailing denial,
As the infinite, travelling cry
Of the Peace to be born from his trial—
The poor little guy!

The Peace of the pure consummation
Foretold in the ages before,
When nation shall strive not with nation,
Nor shall they learn war any more.
But, Jesus!—the carrion faces
That glare at the pestilent sky,
And the trench at the foot of the glaciis—
The poor little guy!

CAUGHT IN A TRAP

Swinburne's Odd Adventure on the Coast of Normandy.

FACED A MADDENING DEATH.

A Perilous Feat That For a Time Entombed Him In a Narrow Tunnel of Solid Rock and Came Near Putting a Premature End to His Mortal Career.

In his youth Swinburne was a famous swimmer, and for years he used to retire in summer to the picturesque little village of Etretat, on the Normandy coast, there to breast the waves and to wander about the chalk cliffs and gaze forth from some coign of vantage upon "the blown, wet face of the sea."

One day he met with a singular adventure, which has never been told in print, and came near putting a premature end to his mortal career.

At one point of the coast a vast natural arch nearly 100 feet in height is formed by a flying buttress at right angles to the general line of the cliffs, which plants its foot below high water mark on the shingle beach. The central mass of this buttress fell or was eaten away by the waves in prehistoric ages, leaving a pointed gothic doorway of remarkable symmetry and mightier than any ever built by man.

It is a famous landmark of the coast and is to be seen in countless marine pictures painted in the latter half of the last century.

The outer springer or pier of this gigantic arch is submerged at flood-tide, but when the water recedes it is seen to be pierced by a small hole or tunnel, also of natural formation, passing clear through the substance of the chalk from one side to the other. This hole is partly choked up with the flint pebbles of which the beach is composed, but space enough remains for a man to crawl through.

The passage is about sixty feet in length, but is bent in its course, so that when halfway through daylight cannot be seen in either direction. It was a local feat of the athletic young fishermen of the region to wriggle their way through the tunnel at low tide.

Swinburne had witnessed one of these performances and made up his mind to attempt the passage himself. He chose a day following one of the fierce storms of late August. When he reached the spot the sun was setting and the beach was deserted. He did not think it worth while to remove any of the rough tweed outing garments that he wore, but got down on his hands and knees and began worming himself into the darkness of the hole.

At first all went well, but as he proceeded the passage narrowed and the slimy walls of the chalk rock so impeded his movements that he was unable any longer to use his arms freely, but could only push with his feet and undulate his body. He had reached the bend of the tunnel and the darkness was absolute. He still pressed on, but only to find himself wedged in yet more tightly.

A minute more and he realized with horror that he could no longer move an inch either forward or backward. The waves had heaped the pebbles up in the center, and he was now firmly embedded within a hundred thousand tons of solid rock.

It was evening. There was no chance of any one's coming to his rescue. No one had seen him enter the tunnel, or had been informed of his purpose. His presence there might not be discovered in days or weeks, and meanwhile the tide would have risen and fallen many times, and he would have been helplessly drowned.

In black darkness, powerless to stir, he must lie and wait for the certain end. The recession and rise of the tide would take, he calculated, not less than six long hours, and his best hope was that madness would render him unconscious long before the end came.

But as he lay there a sound came to his ears that chilled his nerves with a fresh terror. It was the sound of a wave breaking at the farther mouth of the tunnel. The tide was rising and in a few minutes it would begin to fill the narrow passage.

The realization of this fact paralyzed him for a moment; then it stimulated him to almost superhuman effort. Forcing himself on his left side, he succeeded in getting his right arm out beyond him. It gave his body a little more play.

By desperate but systematic wriggings and twistings he was able to work away from beneath him some of the loose shingle, and to gain a little forward. The exertion was tremendous and far beyond his natural strength, but he was working for life or death. It was a race between him and the tide.

The end was sudden. The tunnel abruptly enlarged. He could now crawl on hands and knees. As he scrambled forward, trembling and gasping, a rush of water met and submerged him, but it carried him with it as it receded. It flung him forth into the open air like a wreck of seaweed, bruised, choking and exhausted, but alive, with the blessed sky above him.

Another wave caught him and drove him up on the beach, and he retained just sense and strength enough to scramble up a little farther, beyond immediate danger.

"I know," he said afterward, "the feelings of a soul saved from hell."—James Welton Gray in St. Louis Republic.

MIXED METALS.

Some of the Curious Results Shown in Various Alloys.

In the beginning of man's acquaintance with metals only the softer ones, such as copper, gold, silver and tin, were mined and worked up into utensils, weapons, etc. It was early discovered that an alloy of copper and tin produced a reasonably hard metal called bronze, which was suitable for cutting instruments and, although not as hard as flint, was easier to work and did not break. Then began the bronze age of history.

An alloy is a compound of two or more metals. Alloys generally possess properties vastly different from the parent metals. For instance, gold is the most ductile of all metals. It may be drawn into the finest wire or beaten into a transparent film finer than the thinnest tissue, and yet mix the smallest quantity of antimony with gold and it is not ductile at all. Copper and tin mixed together produce an alloy with a higher specific gravity than either of its constituents, and the same weight will occupy less bulk. Copper and antimony produce a beautiful violet blue alloy.

By mixing together eight parts by weight of bismuth, five parts of lead and three parts of grain tin an alloy is produced which will melt at so low a temperature that a spoon made of it will melt when it is immersed in hot tea, and yet the melting point of each of its components is at least twice that of boiling water.

A small quantity of manganese makes iron almost indifferent to magnetism, while a bit of tungsten will increase its magnetic powers. Copper is a good conductor of electricity, but if a little arsenic be mixed with it it becomes almost a nonconductor. A little tungsten makes steel very much harder. Lead and antimony are used for making type metal because the alloy has the peculiar property of expanding as it cools.—New York World.

PLANNED TO LASSO A SHIP.

An Old Time Mexican Scheme to Outwit the Americans.

A leaflet from Don Ramon's folk lore may interest you. When war had been declared against Mexico and the arrival of the American hosts was daily expected in southern California, St. Agnes was in a tremor. Of course, not of fear, but of excitement.

One day the news came that a United States vessel of war was approaching the harbor. A council of the ancients of the city was immediately convened and many plans of offensive and defensive action were proposed and discussed, and finally the following one, designed by a Frenchman, whose brother had commanded a crack regiment under the great Napoleon, was adopted:

He was to take his spyglass and the only available artillery that St. Agnes afforded—a small brass cannon, which had been used alternately with anvils to fire salutes during religious and civic processions (I am unable to say how many of a pounder it was)—to the top of the mountain, a distance of twelve miles in a bee line from the ocean beach. In the meanwhile all the expert vaqueros, the moment the vessel was sighted, were to conceal themselves and horses along the beach.

When the ship had anchored and the proper moment, in the judgment of the French commander, had arrived, he was to fire the cannon from the top of the mountain, at which signal the vaqueros were to rush through the surf and lasso the masts of the ship, capsize it into the breakers and harpoon the soldiers and crew as they endeavored to escape to shore. This brilliant coup d'etat was not carried out, only because the ship never came.

Martin's Way.

Irishmen are inclined to word perversion; but, says a writer, the following description of slow speech, which often degenerated into a stammer, shows that occasionally they use the best words possible in explaining a thing:

"It's a quare sort uv way Martin talks," said Pat. "It's as if he tuk the words out uv his mout' an' looked at 'em before he gives 'em to yez."—Exchange.

"Pan."

"Pan" was the name of one of the Greek gods. The word means "all," or "universal." Hence "Pantheism," the doctrine that all is God. Hence, too, "Pan-American"—that is, all that is American, all the countries of North and South America.

When Moles Fight.

You would hardly believe that moles, clumsy and almost blind, become perfect demons when they quarrel. No one knows what they quarrel about, but if they once start fighting one has to die. They will keep on in the presence of any number of spectators, hanging on to one another like bulldogs and burying their enormously strong jaws and teeth in one another's flesh.

Hedgehogs, another type of the quiet, inoffensive looking animal, not only fight, but always to the death, and when one is killed the other generally devours him.

Just Spending the Day.

A woman from out of town walked into one of the big hotels the other morning and wrote her name on the register.

"What, madam," said the room clerk, with one of those engaging smiles for which he is famous, "can I offer you in the way of a room?"

"Oh, I don't want a room," was the reply. "I am just spending the day here."

"Good thing some people spend more than that with us," remarked the clerk to himself as she turned smilingly away.—New York Times.

MRS. ALONZO WILSON DIES IN HOSPITAL

The sad news was received early Wednesday morning that Mrs. Alonzo Wilson, residing south of town, had answered the eternal summons at 12:30 Tuesday night at Grant hospital, Columbus, just a week and a day after she had undergone an operation of very grave nature.

A resident of this county for 25 years, belonging to a well known family, and herself an exceptionally fine woman, Mrs. Wilson's death brings sorrow to a large circle of friends and relatives, who sympathize deeply with the heart-broken family.

For two years she had been in ill health, but persisted in her usual round of activities until she was compelled to go to the hospital.

Mrs. Wilson was fifty-two years of age and her death is the first in the immediate family during a period of forty years. Her aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McLaren, of Samatha, are both over eighty years old, and visited her but a short time ago.

The husband and four children, Wilbur, Ruth, Marguerite and Homer are left to mourn a most devoted wife and mother.

Mrs. Wilson will also be greatly missed in the Sugar Grove church, where she was interested in church and Sunday school, and the different church organizations.

Mr. Wilson and one daughter, Miss Ruth, who were with Mrs. Wilson at the hospital, came down from Columbus Wednesday morning and the remains were brought down on the 3:30 afternoon train. They were met by a number of relatives and taken at once to the home.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2:30 at the Sugar Grove church.

The W. R. C. will entertain Friday afternoon with a Kensington at the home of Mrs. Clarke Rowe. All the women of the order are cordially invited.

ABILITY IS KEYNOTE.

In building up the production of "Believe Me," the first thing considered was to get a company together from which nothing could be desired in the way of improving it. This proved quite a task, but still going at it with a vim and determination, the management tried this one and then another until they secured just the people they desired. In the upbuilding of the play every person selected was looked to as a specialty artist of known reputation for originality and ability, and as a result of the careful selection, a company has been formed that absolutely stands second to none.

The keynote to their success has been the fact that ability has been the chief requirement throughout. The company's vehicle, "Believe Me," is a clever comedy filled to the brim with pretty music. It will be seen at The Empire on Tuesday, September 1.

CANDIDATES ARE HEARD

Committee on Resolutions of the Republican Convention Labor For Hours Whipping the Party's Declaration of Principles Into Shape. Proceedings of the Several Conventions at Columbus.

Columbus, Aug. 26.—Ohio Democrats adopted a platform in which the record of achievements of Governor Cox and the Democratic administration are emphasized above everything else. The questions of prohibition and equal suffrage were not touched upon. As to national questions, the Democrats resolved to stand on the record of President Wilson, which was praised in glowing tributes. A call was issued for a national workmen's compensation act, similar to Ohio's law, to protect workmen engaged in interstate commerce.

Standing in bold relief is the endorsement given the Barnes tax law, which is made in the strongest possible terms. Senator Pomerene and Governor Cox aroused enthusiasm when they lauded President Wilson and the Democratic national administration. Campbell, Hogan and other speakers also came in for applause.

The Republican state convention adjourned last night until 10 a. m. today after making futile attempts to obtain the presentation of the party platform by the resolutions committee. A disagreement prevailed in the committee on resolutions. It is comprised of representatives from each of the twenty-two congressional districts. From among the members of the committee subcommittees were named, and they started work last evening on the various planks to be incorporated in the platform. The prohibition question proved to be a stumbling block.

Speeches by Chairman Fess, Frank B. Willis and Warren G. Harding were well received.

Ohio Progressives in convention mobilized their forces in support of a strong and radical platform. In that platform, adopted without a dissenting voice by delegates who were the state and legislative candidates, the state and local organizations, the two-year-old party took a stand hand in hand in alliance with three other militant forces, organized temperance, organized women, organized labor.

Addresses by party leaders enthused the delegates.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

Pursuant to law, the Democratic party of Ohio, in state convention assembled, this 25th day of August, 1914, declares and publishes the following platform of principles:

We most earnestly endorse the administration of Woodrow Wilson. We are profoundly grateful for the peace which his wise statesmanship has preserved as while pitiless war strikes terror to the souls of the citizens of nearly every great nation on earth. We endorse the peace treaties he has negotiated and respectfully invite all the people of this state without regard to partisanship to join us in this expression of deepest appreciation of his patriotism; this pledge of our loyalty, fidelity and devotion in these trying times and in this message of sympathy to him in the hours of his greatest personal grief.

Respectfully we endorse the administration of Woodrow Wilson. We are profoundly grateful for the peace which his wise statesmanship has preserved as while pitiless war strikes terror to the souls of the citizens of nearly every great nation on earth. We endorse the peace treaties he has negotiated and respectfully invite all the people of this state without regard to partisanship to join us in this expression of deepest appreciation of his patriotism; this pledge of our loyalty, fidelity and devotion in these trying times and in this message of sympathy to him in the hours of his greatest personal grief.

With equal earnestness and commendable pride, we endorse and approve the wise, energetic and statesmanlike administration of Governor James M. Cox, his executive associates and the general assembly, who have redeemed to the last letter every platform pledge they made to the people, thus establishing a new record of fidelity to a trust.

Two years ago the people of this state, at a nonpartisan election, ordered the first material change in their constitution in over sixty years, by ratifying more than thirty amendments thereto which had been submitted by a constitutional convention, the members of which had also been elected on a nonpartisan ballot. The vote was emphatic. Thus was imposed a duty on the general assembly and executive elected in 1912, to enact and enforce such laws as would vitalize the people's mandates. In two sessions of the general assembly and on the specific recommendation of the governor in each instance, all the laws necessary to put the people's amendments to their constitution in full force and effect, were enacted. Not a single responsibility was dodged or duty shirked. These laws are Democratic interpretations of the people's will. We stand by each and all of them. We challenge the critics of the opposition to name the law or the laws they would repeal or amend, and, if named, to show what respect. Then an issue may be joined.

Believing that the enactments of the last two years constitute a full satisfaction of the demands of the people as expressed by their votes on the constitutional amendments, we pledge the general assembly which is to be elected in November of this year to the briefest possible session and to the consideration of such matters only as are of general community interest.

The work of the last brief session of the general assembly, which consisted of cutting the state tax levy more than 50 percent, thus reducing the same to the lowest point in Ohio's history, will not excite the criticism of any honest citizen. This result was made possible by the enactment of a new tax law which simply introduced a business principle into the matter of listing property for taxation. The general lightening of the burdens of all honest taxpayers is the law's distinction. It will produce even better and more equitable results next year than this.

We urge upon the national congress the enactment of a workmen's compensation law similar to that in force in this state, to the end that those of our laborers employed in interstate commerce may enjoy the same protection that their fellow employees in Ohio now enjoy.

PROGRESSIVE PLATFORM

Free from factional strife and from the iniquities of partisan bossism, unfettered by the influence of special interests, the Progressives of Ohio rededicate themselves to the cause of equal and exact justice for all.

Reaffirming those great principles of human welfare and popular government which, as embodied in the contract with the people set forth at Chicago in 1912, have made the Progressive party a party that will live and triumph, we again declare our conviction that by reason of their corrupt bosses and inept leadership both the Democratic and Republican organizations in the state and nation have proved themselves unfit for the control of governmental affairs.

We believe that present business conditions reveal a vital weakness in our national commercial and industrial policies. We urge the adoption of a legitimate protective tariff, scientifically provided by a permanent commission, armed with full authority; we urge measures that will permit American labor and capital to develop an American merchant marine that will win back the markets of the world; we demand the overthrow of the foolish academic policy that offers millions of blackmail to a Central American state.

We denounce the administration of Governor Cox as destructive of popular government. We charge that he has used executive power for mere personal advantage and under the guise of efficiency attacked the principle of home rule and built up a sinister personal political machine. We charge that he led the champion of the breweries and is seeking to destroy the temperance laws of the state at the behest of the liquor interests with which he is politically allied.

We pledge our party to the support of county home rule in taxation and an equitable adjustment of taxes with regard to real estate to avoid double taxation; an exemption of $500 of personal property for each person; to nonpartisan municipal and county elections; to the maintenance and simplification of the primary and election laws; to abolition of party nominations for judicial offices and boards of education; the merit system for the public service; the construction and maintenance of main market roads, intercounty highways, county and township roads; the right of counties to adopt the commission form of government; the speedy completion of the Ohio river improvement project; the division of legislative and senatorial districts where there are more than one representative into single legislative districts; to legislation to prevent the abuse of the emergency clause on propositions subject to the referendum; to eight hours' work and a minimum wage for women; one day's rest in seven for all wage workers; the extension of safety laws in the operation of railway trains with a view to further protection of employees and travelers; the enlargement and perfection of the system of workmen's compensation, and to the strict enforcement of all existing laws.

Believing that the United States can not justly claim to be a true democracy while it denies political rights on account of sex, we pledge our support to the constitutional amendment granting suffrage to the women of Ohio.

The traffic in intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes is a great moral and political wrong and an economic waste. We denounce and oppose the so called home rule amendment to the constitution submitted by the liquor interests; we pledge our party to the adoption of the statewide prohibition amendment initiated by the temperance people, and until prohibition is adopted we pledge our party to the maintenance and strict enforcement of the local option laws; we favor an amendment to the federal constitution providing national prohibition of the liquor traffic; the enactment of statutory laws to support the enforcement of the strict enforcement of the laws enacted; and we charge both the Republican and Democratic parties in Ohio with complete subservience to the brewers.

Washington, Aug. 26.—General Powell Clayton, who for fifty years has been a figure in national politics as a Republican, died at his apartments in the Highlands after a long illness. He was ninety years old and a native of Pennsylvania. He served in the civil war as an officer, first as a captain of infantry. He was gradually promoted until he came out of the service as a brigadier general at the close of the war. Following the war he settled on a plantation near Pine Bluff, Ark., and from that day until he ceased his activities in national politics he was recognized as the leader of the Republican party in that state. He was governor of Arkansas from 1868 to 1871 and then served as United States senator until 1877.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 26.—William Sulzer, whose political shade has been troubling Progressives for some time, was a caller at Sagamore Hill. He declared to Colonel Roosevelt that he was going to get the Bull Moose nomination for governor. The colonel took the stand of strict neutrality. The ex-governor forced the Bull Moose leader to listen to him for three hours, and Colonel Roosevelt admitted later that it had been a most interesting discussion.

national commercial and industrial policies. We urge the adoption of a legitimate protective tariff, scientifically provided by a permanent commission, armed with full authority; we urge measures that will permit American labor and capital to develop an American merchant marine that will win back the markets of the world; we demand the overthrow of the foolish academic policy that offers millions of blackmail to a Central American state. We denounce the administration of Governor Cox as destructive of popular government. We charge that he has used executive power for mere personal advantage and under the guise of efficiency attacked the principle of home rule and built up a sinister personal political machine. We charge that he led the champion of the breweries and is seeking to destroy the temperance laws of the state at the behest of the liquor interests with which he is politically allied.

We pledge our party to the support of county home rule in taxation and an equitable adjustment of taxes with regard to real estate to avoid double taxation; an exemption of $500 of personal property for each person; to nonpartisan municipal and county elections; to the maintenance and simplification of the primary and election laws; to abolition of party nominations for judicial offices and boards of education; the merit system for the public service; the construction and maintenance of main market roads, intercounty highways, county and township roads; the right of counties to adopt the commission form of government; the speedy completion of the Ohio river improvement project; the division of legislative and senatorial districts where there are more than one representative into single legislative districts; to legislation to prevent the abuse of the emergency clause on propositions subject to the referendum; to eight hours' work and a minimum wage for women; one day's rest in seven for all wage workers; the extension of safety laws in the operation of railway trains with a view to further protection of employees and travelers; the enlargement and perfection of the system of workmen's compensation, and to the strict enforcement of all existing laws.

MINERS SORE ON DECISION

Denver, Aug. 26.—After a delay of eighty-eight days Governor Ammons made public the findings of the court-martial that tried twenty-one officers and enlisted men of the Colorado National Guard on charges of murder, manslaughter, arson, robbery and assault, growing out of the destruction April 26 of the Ludlow tent colony, in which three miners, thirteen women and children and two milliamen were killed. The court-martial verdict, a complete vindication of the accused men, is approved in full by the governor.

The United Mine Workers will go into the civil courts and ask that the entire court-martial proceedings be declared illegal and the soldiers brought to trial on charges of murder and arson.

Unabashed.

Years ago Isidore de Lara used to sing his own songs at concerts to his own accompaniment. The most popular of them was "The Garden of Sleep." Once—so runs the story—Mr. de Lara was "Garden of Sleeping" at a private house, and he was immensely annoyed by George Moore, who went on insistently talking after the song had begun. Mr. de Lara sang a few bars and then sprang indignantly to his feet.

"Mr. Moore," he said, "I was singing the other day before the Prince of Wales, and he spoke, and I stopped."

"Well, my dear chap," replied Mr. Moore calmly, "he survives."

Mr. de Lara had humor enough to join in the general laugh.—London Answers.

DEFEAT COMES TO GOV. BLEASE

Spartansburg, S. C., Aug. 26.—Results of the primary election indicate that Governor Blease has been defeated for the senatorial nomination by Senator Ellison D. Smith by at least 10,000 majority.

What He Left

Residing in a little village is a lawyer who is famous for drawing wills in which branch of business he has long enjoyed a monopoly of the country for miles around.

A few months since a wealthy man died. There was much speculation as to the value of the property, and the town gossip set about to find out the facts. He hunted up the lawyer, and, after a few preliminary remarks about the deceased, he said rather bluntly: "I suppose you made Brown's will?"

"Yes."

"Then you probably know how much he left. Would you mind telling me?"

"Not at all," the lawyer answered, as he resumed his writing. "He left everything he had."

Did His Share.

The lecturer raised his voice with emphatic confidence.

"It is my belief, and I venture to assert it, he declared, 'that there isn't a man in this audience who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our vast forests.'"

A rather timid, henpecked looking man quietly arose in the rear of the hall and said:

"I—er—I've shot woodpeckers!"—Everybody's.

An Idyl.

"And your fiancé?"

Pretty Rich.

Louise—Are they rich enough to afford competent servants? Julia—My dear! They're rich enough to afford dishonest ones.—Life.

Bravery of a Boy.

"One of the bravest acts I witnessed during the whole war," said an officer of the Army of Northern Virginia, "was that of a young soldier who was probably not over sixteen. We had thought of him as only a boy, although he went with the regiment on all of its marches and lived with it in all its encampments."

"One day there was a fierce engagement. In the midst of it a bullet struck this boy in the breast, and he fell. Our colonel ordered his men to dismount, and as he himself sprang from his horse, the boy called out in a weak voice, 'I will hold your horse, colonel!'"

"Stopping in the midst of the storm of bullets to gaze in pity on the white, boyish face, the colonel said, 'But you can't do that, lad—you are dying.'"

"I know I am, colonel," the gallant boy replied. 'But I can hold the reins when I am dead.'"

"The colonel placed the bridle in the trembling hands and went forward. When the fight was over he hurried back and found the boy lying dead, the bridle reins still wrapped tightly round his limp right hand."—Youth's Companion.

Queer Story of a Grave.

A curious barren mound is to be seen in Montgomery churchyard. Whatever the cause, there is plainly to be seen a strip of sterility in the form of a cross among a mass of verdure.

With the mound a melancholy legend is connected. It is called "Robert's Grave," and the story is that beneath this barren hillock lie the remains of an innocent man who was hanged on mistaken evidence. It is said that while the man stood on the gallows with the rope round his neck he solemnly declared, as a proof of his innocence, that grass should never grow on his grave. And even so it was and is. Any one who attempts to frustrate the fulfillment of this prophecy by sowing grass on this spot pays the penalty with his life. Instances are given of individuals who have been rash enough to do so and have met their doom soon afterward.—Cardiff Western Mail.

UNDER A VOLCANO

A Town That Lives In Perennial Dread of Extinction.

COLIMA'S CRATER IN ACTION.

It's a Solemn Spectacle For the Dwellers in the Shadow of the Gloomy Peak When "Old Faithful" Explodes, as It Does Regularly Once a Year.

It is singular how indifferent to a persistently threatened danger human beings can become, even when the danger is of a deadly nature and may imperil their very lives. Harry H. Dunn, in the Montreal Herald and Star, tells of a case in which a whole townful of people lie under the constant threat of extinction by a volcano.

The roof of the little boxlike hotel in Colima, capital of the state of Colima, in Mexico, was freshly drenched with water in a vain effort to fight off some of September's heat. I think there were eighteen of us gathered there in the cool, gray night. The almost silent town lay like a black and white check-board at our feet.

Twenty miles away, across a valley still green with the rains of summer, rose a conical mountain, almost solitary. Even by night it looked sinister; by day it was terrible, with its barren, lava coated sides, its gas exuding cone shrouded even by the cultures which haunted mountain and plain. It was the volcano of Colima, the "Old Faithful" of craters, which explodes regularly once a year—and it was almost due for an exhibition.

"He should begin soon," droned the hotel keeper. "Maybe today, maybe tomorrow, maybe not for a week, but it is the middle of September, and it is his time."

The old man had scarcely finished when a bubble, black as night, crowded itself out of the broken end of the mountain, which we knew was a pot of molten stone, twenty miles away. The bubble, so dark that we could see it plainly, swelled like a growing puffball and then, pushed out from below, rose like a giant umbrella, with incredible speed, into the sky. Behind it came a straight tubular column of smoke, such smoke as that of which the bubble was made, black and thick and ominous.

Up, up, up, rose the bubble, riding, it seemed, on the column below it. It appeared to hang like a huge blanket a thousand feet in the heavens; then slowly, like some great octopus feeling its way along the bed of the sea, the bubble flattened and began to spread out. Probably it moved miles every minute, but it was far away and so monstrous that we could not judge it by ordinary standards.

It seemed that the town below us heaved a long sigh. The thing for which its ten or twelve thousand inhabitants had been waiting was about to happen. The mighty drama was about to be enacted before their eyes, as it was before the Spanish conquistadores set foot on Mexican soil. Yet to them the spectacle was ever exciting, for its end might be death, might be destruction of their town, as it had been the destruction of the many smaller towns clustered more closely round the skirts of the gloomy peak.

The roofs filled with people. Here and there a woman screamed; many, both men and women, prayed; querulous cries and questions from children rose on the night air, and the bells in the churches began to ring, slowly at first and then more rapidly, as the fire god began to play about the crest of Colima.

Like a waterspout on the crest of a lofty roller at sea, the smoke column and its spreading top rested for a moment on the volcano and then, with a thunderous outrush of air, which must have been heard for at least a hundred miles, vanished into thin air. A column of fire took their place. No ordinary fire was this. No flame various parts of the country. Word has reached here that 8,000 of them under General Ortega revolted at Salina Cruz, on the west coast, and news of revolts in other places is constantly arriving.

Nothing is known here about General Villa's movements and considerable apprehension is felt that a new and general outbreak is in process of beginning.

The federal troops who have been mustered out are thronging into Vera Cruz. They have been falsely instructed by their officers, also mustered out, that the United States army will care for them. All of them have been paid in money that General Carranza has decreed worthless. As a result many of them are penniless and not a few are on the verge of starvation.

General Funston will have to face this situation. As yet he has announced no plans. It is generally recognized, however, that the problem is a serious one and may cause trouble.

ever kindled by human hands burned so white as that tower of luminous bits of lava and sand and stone and superheated gases that shot upward from the mouth of the crater.

I gazed at it spellbound as the light of day spread round all over the valley and the city. A constant roar came from the volcano, a roar so insistent, so monotonous, that I could not hear what the old hotel keeper who stood at my elbow was saying. I bent my ear to him and heard: "Not so bad as last year. Mayhap we shall not be harmed."

PLANT PUZZLES.

What, For Instance, Guides the Vine In Finding Its Support?

A plant that actually goes insect hunting is among the latest of the scientific discoveries. It is known as the sundew. Its leaves, covered with tentacles, close in upon a fly the moment it touches them and slowly strangle it. This has long been familiar to the naturalists, but it now develops that the plant does not passively wait for its prey. If a fly alights within a half inch of one of the leaves it slowly approaches the insect until close enough to lay hold and destroy, thus demonstrating the possession of some sort of sense or instinct with which plants are not usually supposed to be endowed.

Something of the same sort is manifested in that plant parasite, the dodder. It germinates from seed, sending out a thin, threadlike growth, which winds in and out among the grass stalks until it finally approaches its natural victim. Then its growth is greatly accelerated. In a sense it fairly leaps upon its host and once there not only fastens to it, but multiplies with surprising rapidity.

If a stake be driven within a few inches of a growing sweet pea vine it will be observed that a tendrill drops from a leaf of the plant in the direction of the stake. Forthwith the whole upper shoot of the vine bends in the same direction, and very soon the tendrill is able to fasten itself. The same observation holds more or less true with all climbing plants.

Vegetation of various kinds sends roots through distances, sometimes to be measured in yards, that they may reach soil or water below. Science is asking if the sundew knows that the fly is near.

Has the vine a method of detecting the proximity of its support?

Does the plant so situated that its nourishment is lacking realize that far below it are earth and water?

An affirmative answer involves the admission of a sense or instinct in vegetation that corresponds to that in animal life, and yet those who have studied the matter most profoundly give that very answer.—Exchange.

Too Modest.

Sir W. S. Gilbert's own story of his first experience as a playwright is instructive. He took his maiden attempt to a manager, who read it carefully and offered to accept it. "Now," said he to the overjoyed dramatist, "what do you expect me to pay you for this?" The young author, not liking to be too forward, modestly suggested 30 guineas. The manager immediately wrote out a check for the desired amount and, presenting it to Gilbert, said: "Young man, let me give you a word of advice. Never sell so good a play for such a small amount again."

A Curious Trial.

The records of Kirby Matzeard church in Yorkshire, England, mention a curious trial which took place in the church in the seventeenth century. A woman was tried for stealing a skull out of the churchyard. Her defense was that she took the skull to put under the pillow of a sleepless friend as a charm to make her sleep. She was reprimanded and ordered to put the skull back.

BOATS OF THE ANCIENTS.

Floating Palaces Used by the Old Greeks and Romans.

It is generally agreed that Noah's ark measured about 450 feet in length, seventy-five feet in breadth and forty-five in depth. It is interesting to note that the proportions of these dimensions are practically the same as those of the great modern ocean liners.

The Greeks and Romans constructed several large vessels measuring upward of 500 feet. These were built for the emperors or rulers and were little more than enormous scows, without any means of propulsion. Upon these were erected elaborate cabin accommodations, and even gardens were planted. A Roman bath was installed on one of these boats.

A vessel 420 feet in length was built by Ptolemy which was propelled by 500 rowers, arranged in five banks, using oars fifty-seven feet in length. The boat is recorded to have developed considerable speed.

The fame of the Thalamagus still lives. This boat, which measured 300 feet in length, forty feet in breadth and sixty in depth, was said to have been the most beautiful craft in antiquity and was used exclusively by the emperor.

A king of Syracuse is also credited with having built a very palatial boat, whose cabins were hung with costly silks and decorated with rare statues. After the decline of the Roman empire no great ships were constructed for more than 1,000 years.

The biggest modern ship, the Vaterland, measures 950 feet, thus approximately fulfilling the tradition that ships would come to be 1,000 feet long.—Boston Herald.

Highland English.

English as she is spoke in the remote highlands is not exactly the tongue of the south, which fact is illustrated by a brief conversation which took place between three highland ghillies who had a sup each of the laird's own mountain dew. Says Tougal, "That was the fery pest whusky her nainself nefer tasted in all her porntays." Assented Tomnit, "So did I neither." And Angus corroborated, "Neither did I too."—London Globe.

Coming Into Her Own.

Woman is certainly coming into her own. Even in tender romance she is exerting an influence. The young man had just been accepted. In his rapture he exclaimed, "But do you think, my love, I am good enough for you?"

His strong minded fiancée looked sternly at him for a moment and replied: "Good enough for me? You've got to be!"—Judge.

Cost of Naturalization.

At the time of filing the declaration of intention an alien is required to pay to the clerk of the court a fee of $1. At the time of filing a petition for naturalization the petitioner is required to pay to the clerk of the court a fee of $4.—New York American.

TOWER OF LONDON.

It Once Had a Menagerie With a Murrderous Orang Outang.

It is not generally known that until the year 1834 there was a menagerie of wild beasts in the Tower of London. In his book, "London Survivals," the Rev. P. H. Ditchfield writes:

"A word or two may be said about this collection of beasts. It commenced with the present of three leopards from the Emperor Frederick to Henry III.—an appropriate gift, as our sovereign bore three of these animals on his shield of arms, and then a white bear was added, for which the sheriffs of London were ordered to provide a muzzle and an iron chain to secure him when out of the water and a long, stout cord to hold him when fishing in the Thames. We fear his successors at the zoological gardens do not enjoy the like diversion. Then came an elephant. In the time of Edward II. there was a lion, for which the sheriffs, who must have deemed these creatures troublesome beasts, had to provide daily a quarter of mutton.

"Paul Hentzner saw here in 1598 three lionesses, a lion of great size—called Edward VI. from his having been born in that reign—a tiger, a lynx, a wolf, 'exceedingly old,' a porcupine and an eagle. James I. often visited the menagerie and used to enjoy baiting the lion with dogs or seeing a fight between a bear and a lion. In 1754 there were two 'man tigers'—orang-outangs—one of which killed a boy by throwing a cannon ball at him."

TERRIFIC BATTLE FOUGHT COMPANY M TAKING PART

After the first terrific battle, in which the loss (in ammunition) on both sides was very heavy, the Fourth regiment succeeded in pitching camp at Maple Grove at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, with practically every man in good health and everything moving according to schedule.

Every member of Company M is enjoying the camp life immensely, and all are well. Tonight the small shelter tents again will be used, with the larger tents being placed in readiness as fast as they arrive.

It was while about one mile from camp that the engagement occurred, and for some little time the hills resounded with the crackle and roar of musketry as the invaders were repulsed with great loss.

Camp was broken on the Entrekin farm near Frankfort at an early hour Wednesday morning, and the men had splendid conditions for making the tramp of eight miles to the final camp at Maple Grove.

Another engagement will take place some time Thursday, with a third Friday.

Many persons from this city will go down to Maple Grove during the week, and a record-breaking crowd is expected for Sunday.

HOME WATERMELONS ARE ON THE MARKET

With the advent of home grown watermelons on the market the price of this commodity comes within easy reach of the purse of everyone. There is little possibility of their getting very low in price this season because of their scarcity.

Home grown melons have been on the local market for several days and are of excellent quality considering the general run of melons this season. They have dropped from their exclusive position in the larders of monarchs and mighty men and can now be bought at retail at from 25c to 35c.

Melons from the vicinity of Mt. Sterling are being marketed here and are of good quality.

TOURISTS PASS THROUGH CITY

Gene Stewart, Gus Brunner, Perce Hubbard and Clifford Mohler, of Portsmouth, passed through this city Wednesday morning on their way home after a tour covering parts of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

The men were in a Buick touring car, and the car was covered with pennants from nearly every city of importance through which they had passed.

Little trouble was encountered on a journey of 2600 miles. The men stopped at the postoffice in this city, and left for Chillicothe after a few minutes stop.

FOUND DEAD

By Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, August 26.—Police today are endeavoring to identify the well dressed middle-aged man who fell 150 feet over a cliff to a horrible death in the Cuyahoga falls last night. They are also endeavoring to find the well dressed woman who was with him when he took the fatal plunge. Charles Brown, who was fishing on the bank of the river near the falls last night heard a woman's scream followed almost instantly by the thud of a body. He ran to the spot and found the man dead and horribly mangled.

Building a Fire.

In building a wood fire in an open fireplace shake out a double sheet of newspaper and crush it tightly, leaving the edges loose, that it may ignite easily. The back log should be of the greatest size that the fireplace will hold and may be of green wood, as this is the slowest to burn out, and the draft and fire are strongest in the back. The log should be shoved against the wall. If it is a split log the inside of it should be turned toward the front. Three logs are a good number to start a fire with—the back log, a smaller one in front and the third log on top of these. All of the ashes of the first three or four should be left on the hearth, as they make a fine bed for keeping the embers hot after they have fallen through the auditions. The wood should be mixed in order to have an ideal fire—green wood with dry, and the harder varieties, oak and pine, with the wood of old fruit trees that have died. Apple wood gives a mellow, soft light. — New York Sun.

Connecticut Taverns of 1644.

Taverns came early, and under order of the general court in 1644 they were established "not only in Hartford, but others in each town upon our river." An old authority tells what a guest might expect:

"Clean sheets to lie in wherein no man had been lodged since they came from the landress and have a servant to kindle his fire and one to pull off his boots and make them clean and have the hosts and hostess to visit him and to eat with the host or at a common table if he pleases or eat in his chamber, commanding what meate he will, according to his appetite. Yea, the kitchen being open to him to order the meat to be dressed as he liketh it best."

The landlord was not to allow a person to be intoxicated in his house or to drink excessively or to tipple after 9 o'clock at night. — "A History of Connecticut," by George F. Clark.

The Sneeze.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this terrible malady began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The exclamation was thus originally a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

CAROLINA VOTE POURING IN

By Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., August 26.—Additional but incomplete reports today from all counties in the Democratic senatorial primary, give Governor Cole L. Blease 48,000 and Senator E. D. Smith 65,000, out of 117,000 votes, reported. The returns seem to show Smith maintaining a majority sufficient to renominate him over his three opponents. In the race for Governor, Robert A. Cooper held a majority of about 6,000 votes over Richard I. Manning his nearest opponent.

HEIGHT OF WAVES.

In Severe Storms the Crests May Mount Fifty Feet.

It is only in the imagination of the poets that waves rise "mountain high." The exact altitude and length of waves have been measured with scientific accuracy, and the record waves are carefully recorded. Waves in shallow water are, as a rule, higher than those in open or deep water. The height of a wave is commonly about one-fifteenth its length.

The longest wave on record was 2,500 feet, measuring from crest to crest, its period being about twenty-two seconds. Waves of extreme length are seldom very high. A wave 2,500 feet in length, rising in deep water, will have a height of about fifty feet.

When a wave enters shallow water its crest becomes considerably higher, and one of a height of forty feet will frequently rise to fifty feet. If it meets resistance, it may be thrown up twice this height.

In severe storms at sea waves rarely reach a height of fifty feet. The average in such time has a period of about ten seconds, which would indicate a length of about 500 feet. Waves with a period of ten seconds have a length of from 150 to 300 feet and a height of thirty-three feet and form a very high sea. — Exchange.

Stevenson's Retort.

An interesting letter is Stevenson's in reply to an autograph hunter who had spelled his name with a "ph" instead of a "v."

"The few lines with which you have found time to honor me," he replied, "contain certain indications of your character on which I take pleasure in dwelling. They show you so illiterate that I cannot judge your admiration flattery. They show you so careless of giving trouble to me that I am myself careless how much offense I may convey to you, and they are so ill penned that I am tempted to hope you will discover a difficulty in perusing my answer and place it unread in your collection. The next time it shall occur to you to trouble an author, as you have troubled me find out—I do not say what he has written; far less would I suggest that you should read it—but find out how he is in the habit of spelling his unpretentious name and give him upon that point the flattery of imitation." — Chicago Herald.

Making Shot.

Even among sportsmen there are probably many people who are not acquainted with the manner in which shot is made. The process is carried out at what is known as a shot tower. This is a tall tower of metal or stone with a tank at the top filled with molten lead. The bottom of this tank is perforated with holes, and there is a slide underneath it, also perforated. This slide is pulled from side to side, and every time two holes come opposite each other a small quantity of molten lead falls through. As these drops fall through the air they assume a globular shape, and if the tower is of sufficient length they solidify before reaching the bottom. Here they fall into a tank of cold water and are cooled. When the shot has to be small the slide is worked more quickly than when it has to be larger. — Pearson's Weekly.

WILL ENTER KAMINA

By Associated Press.
London, August 26.—(Bulletin).—The allies will enter Kamina Thursday.

By Associated Press.
London, August 26.—“At last the British army is at grips with the Germans,” says the Ostend correspondent of the Daily Mail.

“It was a great moment when the British general staff with its men arrived. The inhabitants went mad with enthusiasm. ‘The British army has come to Belgium,’ exclaimed the townspeople gleefully. They had no difficulty in obtaining needed provisions. All requisitions were paid for in gold. The civil population was ordered to retire in the direction of France. The troops advanced in battle positions at 3 o’clock in the morning. At 4 o’clock eight German aeroplanes appeared. Thereupon a flock of British aeroplanes rose like birds to drive them away.

“Then the artillery began to talk and the air became thick with cannon powder. The great battle had begun. Forward went the infantry. Rifle fire and maxim fire added to the boom of the big guns. Sunrise mingled with the glow of burning forests and the flash of guns.

“This was Monday. The battle continued Tuesday and probably will continue for several days. The great battle which is now in full swing along the whole French, British and Belgian lines is really a series of linked battles forming what may well be the decisive engagement of western Europe. It is a supreme effort on the part of the Germans to break into France, an effort which, if stopped, must mean disaster to three-quarters of a million German soldiers. There seems to be no soldiers left to guard the German line of communication. All is being hazarded on the success or failure of this battle. The German advance has been rapid and steady. Their columns have averaged 20 miles a day since they reached Brussels.

The Daily Mail believes that the Germans will occupy Ostend for use later as a base of operation against England.

“The German movement against Ostend is of great importance and is dictated possibly by naval as well as military considerations,” says the paper.

“Ostend is only 66 miles off the British coast. If the Germans establish themselves there and bring up heavy artillery, they may render it a dangerous base of operations against England. Airships acting from it could watch the channel and the Thames and carry out raids against Great Britain.

FIGHT ON LIQUOR; IGNORE SUFFRAGE

By Associated Press.
Columbus, Aug. 26.—The Resolutions Committee after an all night session, completed its labors and presented a report to the Republican state platform convention when it reconvened here at 9:30 today. There was no opposition in the committee on ignoring woman suffrage, the fight being between the “wet and dry” delegates on the liquor question. The “drys” positively refused to allow the question to go unnoticed and fought hard to place the convention as favoring state wide prohibition. The liquor plank is as follows: “While the traffic in intoxicating liquor is permitted in Ohio we stand unalterably in favor of its continued restriction or limitation by such laws as are now a part of our statutes or as hereafter may be enacted, except that we propose the decentralization of the licensing authority. The present plan of appointing license commissioners by the Governor tends to make a political machine of the saloon.” The convention then adjourned.

The gunner repeated the operation on the third shot which cleared the Breslau quarter deck and put her after gun out of action. The cruiser fired 30 shots in return.

"The commander in chief, requiring all available forces on the Meuse, has ordered the progressive abandonment of occupied territory. Muelhausen again has been evacuated. A new battle is in progress between Muelhausen, department of the Nord, and Donon, in central Vosges. On it hangs the fate of France. It is a matter of hard necessity."

MAGIC IN GOLF.

It Looked Like an Impossible Putt, but Travis Mastered It.

"I once saw Walter J. Travis, the veteran, sink the most wonderful putt it has ever been my lot to witness," says Jerome D. Travers in the American Magazine.

The occasion was a Metropolitan championship at Garden City, with Travis and Wilder of Boston in a hard match. Travis was four down and four to play, hanging on by a thin thread of hope. But Travis settled down and won the fifteenth and sixteenth holes, leaving himself only two down, with two holes left. He had to win both, of course, to even get a half. But his rally seemed to be fading out at the seventeenth hole, and those who had wagered four to one against Wilder—one man I know had bet $200 to $50 on Travis—were looking on with sick expressions. For all Wilder needed was a half here to win the match. And after playing three shots he was only four feet from the cup. And Travis on his third shot was barely on the green, thirty feet away.

"The battle seemed to be over beyond any hope, for Travis was not only thirty feet away, but he had one of the trickiest and hardest greens on the course to putt over. And even if he made the putt the odds were that Wilder would also make his from that distance. Travis had no chance to try for a straight putt. There were two decided breaks in the slope of the green, one to the left and one to the right. And between these two mounded slopes there was a narrow gap between knolls. It was impossible to follow the line of this gap, because the cup was set back of a knoll to the left, blocking entrance in that direction.

"He had only one way to go, and that was to take the mounded slope to the right. The Old Man walked up to the cup and studied the line carefully from that angle. Then he walked slowly back, studying the lay of the ground along the line he must take. He had to figure all this tricky slope to the inch and to the inch for thirty feet. For any slight break off the right line would probably put him three or four feet away at the finish.

"After a careful survey he walked back to his putt and with a free tap sent the ball spinning along. It took the slope to the right, wound its way along this raised mound and, winding, turning, twisting, up slope and down slope, it broke in at exactly the right spot, about twenty-eight feet away, and it then plumped squarely into the center of the cup, taking its last run from a decided downhill spin where the green sloped off abruptly toward the hole. I've never seen another like it."

The compilation indicates Oct. 7 as the ultimate date at which all repatriation can be accomplished.

There are no circumstances that I can see that call for my political activity." In his statement Mr. Hearst approves of Ambassador Gerard for the senatorial office.

Stammered to Himself.

To those who stutter or stammer let me suggest my personal cure. At about fourteen I was attacked by a bad habit of stammering and couldn't start a remark without it. The other boys laughed at me, and elders projected complicated cures. But the absurdity of the situation appealed to me. Why couldn't I say "I" at once without the preliminary stammer? It was obviously necessary to stutter, often before saying "No." Well, why shouldn't I stutter to myself? The method was adopted. When a sentence had to be started the stammer was carried out in silence—if a dozen "n's" had to start a "No." And after a few days of deliberate speech, with the stammer done in silence, I was delivered entirely from the habit.—London Standard.

Japanese Child Jugglers.

Among the itinerant street entertainers in London are a number of tiny Japanese children, usually boys. They make their way into hotel and public house bars, saloons and restaurants and, producing a sheaf of knives from their pockets, suddenly begin juggling with them in the most expert manner, accompanying the performance with a monotonous singsong which seems to be inseparable from the exhibition. Being very small, they seldom depart without receiving a shower of coppers, to which they respond at the doorway with a little chant of thanksgiving. It is difficult to guess the age of Japanese children, but none of the tiny tots engaged in this business appear to be more than seven years old.

My friend vowed he would see them in—chancery before he paid that and struck it out.—London Chronicle.

A Kipling Anecdote.

The old postman at Westward Ho, near Bideford, in Devon, and the scene of "Stalky & Co.," is reported in T. P.'s London Weekly as telling an interesting anecdote of Rudyard Kipling, dating from the time when Kipling himself was a boy at school at Westward Ho. It appears that Beckwith, the aquatic expert, came to Westward Ho to give an exhibition from the pier, which was crowded with the usual summer sightseers and a fair sprinkling of boys from the school. After some evolutions in the water the swimmer commenced a series of diving performances, and it was after a sensational dive from the top of the pier that the spectators were amazed to see a chubby, stocky boy run to the edge of the pier and repeat the dive with all the mannerisms of the expert. Inquiry elicited the fact that the boy was named Kipling, and it is by this incident more than any other that the Bideford people remember the now famous author.

Possibilities of the Mind

There is an old saying: "Hanging is nothing when you get used to it."

Like all the old sayings that have survived the ages, there is a vast amount of truth in it. It is an extreme statement of the adaptability of the human mind to any condition. Once the mind is prepared for it, men go to death as to a banquet. There is nothing can terrify the human soul properly poised. It is the surprise of the moment; the horrifying aspect of the unusual that staggers and dismays. The savage red man, schooled in his mind to burn by inches and have his flesh torn from his bones, bit by bit, without so much as the movement of a facial muscle, denoting pain, would flee in uncontrollable terror at the discharge of a sky-rocket. Men and women of the highest culture faced the guillotine in the French revolution with a smile. The soldier in the fierce charge of battle with his comrades falling in death at every step, pushes forward without thought of fear. The worst that can befall him, he is already prepared to endure. The French women, who stood upon the guillotine without a tremor would have shrieked with fright if a mouse had appeared suddenly upon their parlor floor. And many a soldier who pushed recklessly into the ranks of death has shaken with fear at the sight of a fancied ghost. In the one case the mind was prepared and in the other it was thrown into confusion by the unexpected.

Napoleon, with his usual modesty, said that he never knew but one man other than himself, who possessed two o'clock in the morning courage. That is a disposition to meet death at once when wakened from a sound sleep without giving the mind time to prepare itself.

The uncertainty of tomorrow is what makes most men miserable. If they are poor, they fear that their family is going to starve if they get sick or disabled or die. If they are rich they fear that they may become poor, or be disgraced, or that a thousand disasters may befall them or those they love.

And in the far gloaming just a little farther than human mind can see, looms a devouring spectre, the terrible father of human distress—uncertainty. It is a poor man indeed who does not face the inevitable with serenity. But it takes a great soul to look calmly into the face of all the disasters that "may come".

THE KINGDOM OF SERBIA, ELATED BY ITS RECENT SUCCESS IN THE BALKAN WAR, WHICH NEARLY DOUBLED ITS POPULATION, INSTEAD OF DIRECTING ITS EFFORTS TOWARD HEALING THE WOUNDS INFLICTED ON MACEDONIA, WITH ITS BURNED VILLAGES AND DECEASED POPULATION, COULD NOT OR WOULD NOT REFRAIN FROM KEEPING ALIVE THE AGITATION AGAINST THE INTEGRITY OF THE DUAL MONARCHY.

Austria had to clear up the situation once and forever. The question of keeping her southern provinces intact is a vital issue. SHE HAD TO ACT IN SELF DEFENSE. She wants no enlargement of territory and proved this during the last Balkan war, when it would have been easy for her to occupy all the territory now acquired by Serbia. AUSTRIA-HUNGARY REQUIRES GUARANTEES FOR THE FUTURE, WITHOUT WHICH THE PEACE IN THE BALKANS CANNOT BE MAINTAINED.

THE POOR LITTLE GUY.

While the legions are locked on the dead line.

While the dreadnoughts are glooming the seas,

While horrors of rumor and headline Give a tang to an evening of ease,

Let us kneel in the just of all faction. Let us pray to the peace from on high

For a small unspectacular fraction— The poor little guy!

In the fangs of the strangling wire He slips in the slime of the dead;

He blinks at the spume of the fire And the scream of the stream of the lead;

And yet—he knew nought of the plotting. And nought can he profit thereby;

But his is the dying—and rotting— The poor little guy!

Let us pray for his kine in the stable. For his ass and his ox and his swine,

For his chair and his plate on the table. For his cornfield and orchard and vine,

For the tilt where the women are plying. For the bed where he never shall lie,

For the ache that is worse than the dying— The poor little guy!

A pitiful pawn of Vienna, Of Kaiser, of King or of Czar,

He is pushed to the pit of Gehenna. To the slide of the great Abattoir. He goes as the wailing denial.

As the infinite, travailing cry Of the Peace to be born from his trial— The poor little guy!

The Peace of the pure consummation Foretold in the ages before,

When nation shall strive not with nation. Nor shall they learn war any more.

But, Jesus!—the carrion faces That glare at the pestilent sky, And the trench at the foot of the glaci—

The poor little guy! —New York Sun.

CAUGHT IN A TRAP

Swinburne's Odd Adventure on the Coast of Normandy.

FACED A MADDENING DEATH.

A Perilous Feat That For a Time Entombed Him In a Narrow Tunnel of Solid Rock and Came Near Putting a Premature End to His Mortal Career.

In his youth Swinburne was a famous swimmer, and for years he used to retire in summer to the picturesque little village of Etretat, on the Normandy coast, there to breast the waves and to wander about the chalk cliffs and gaze forth from some coign of vantage upon "the blown, wet face of the sea."

One day he met with a singular adventure, which has never been told in print, and came near putting a premature end to his mortal career.

At one point of the coast a vast natural arch nearly 100 feet in height is formed by a flying buttress at right angles to the general line of the cliffs, which plants its foot below high water mark on the shingle beach. The central mass of this buttress fell or was eaten away by the waves in prehistoric ages, leaving a pointed gothic doorway of remarkable symmetry and mightier than any ever built by man.

It is a famous landmark of the coast and is to be seen in countless marine pictures painted in the latter half of the last century. The outer springer or pier of this gigantic arch is submerged at flood-tide, but when the water recedes it is seen to be pierced by a small hole or tunnel, also of natural formation, passing clear through the substance of the chalk from one side to the other. This hole is partly choked up with the flint pebbles of which the beach is composed, but space enough remains for a man to crawl through.

The passage is about sixty feet in length, but is bent in its course, so that when halfway through daylight cannot be seen in either direction. It was a local feat of the athletic young fishermen of the region to wriggle their way through the tunnel at low tide.

Swinburne had witnessed one of these performances and made up his mind to attempt the passage himself. He chose a day following one of the fierce storms of late August. When he reached the spot the sun was setting and the beach was deserted. He did not think it worth while to remove any of the rough tweed outing garments that he wore, but got down on his hands and knees and began worming himself into the darkness of the hole.

At first all went well, but as he proceeded the passage narrowed and the slimy walls of the chalk rock so impeded his movements that he was unable any longer to use his arms freely, but could only push with his feet and undulate his body. He had reached the bend of the tunnel and the darkness was absolute. He still pressed on, but only to find himself wedged in yet more tightly.

A minute more and he realized with horror that he could no longer move an inch either forward or backward. The waves had heaped the pebbles up in the center, and he was now firmly embedded within a hundred thousand tons of solid rock.

It was evening. There was no chance of any one's coming to his rescue. No one had seen him enter the tunnel, or had been informed of his purpose. His presence there might not be discovered in days or weeks, and meanwhile the tide would have risen and fallen many times, and he would have been helplessly drowned.

In black darkness, powerless to stir, he must lie and wait for the certain end. The recession and rise of the tide would take, he calculated, not less than six long hours, and his best hope was that madness would render him unconscious long before the end came.

But as he lay there a sound came to his ears that chilled his nerves with a fresh terror. It was the sound of a wave breaking at the farther mouth of the tunnel. The tide was rising and in a few minutes it would begin to fill the narrow passage.

The realization of this fact paralyzed him for a moment; then it stimulated him to almost superhuman effort. Forcing himself on his left side, he succeeded in getting his right arm out beyond him. It gave his body a little more play.

By desperate but systematic wriggings and twistings he was able to work away from beneath him some of the loose shingle, and to gain a little forward. The exertion was tremendous and far beyond his natural strength, but he was working for life or death. It was a race between him and the tide.

The end was sudden. The tunnel abruptly enlarged. He could now crawl on hands and knees. As he scrambled forward, trembling and gasping, a rush of water met and submerged him, but it carried him with it as it receded. It flung him forth into the open air like a wreck of seaweed, bruised, choking and exhausted, but alive, with the blessed sky above him.

Another wave caught him and drove him up on the beach, and he retained just sense and strength enough to scramble up a little farther, beyond immediate danger.

"I know," he said afterward, "the feelings of a soul saved from hell."—James Welton Gray in St. Louis Republic.

MIXED METALS.

Some of the Curious Results Shown in Various Alloys.

In the beginning of man's acquaintance with metals only the softer ones, such as copper, gold, silver and tin, were mined and worked up into utensils, weapons, etc. It was early discovered that an alloy of copper and tin produced a reasonably hard metal called bronze, which was suitable for cutting instruments and, although not as hard as flint, was easier to work and did not break. Then began the bronze age of history.

An alloy is a compound of two or more metals. Alloys generally possess properties vastly different from the parent metals. For instance, gold is the most ductile of all metals. It may be drawn into the finest wire or beaten into a transparent film finer than the thinnest tissue, and yet mix the smallest quantity of antimony with gold and it is not ductile at all. Copper and tin mixed together produce an alloy with a higher specific gravity than either of its constituents, and the same weight will occupy less bulk. Copper and antimony produce a beautiful violet blue alloy.

By mixing together eight parts by weight of bismuth, five parts of lead and three parts of grain tin an alloy is produced which will melt at so low a temperature that a spoon made of it will melt when it is immersed in hot tea, and yet the melting point of each of its components is at least twice that of boiling water.

A small quantity of manganese makes iron almost indifferent to magnetism, while a bit of tungsten will increase its magnetic powers. Copper is a good conductor of electricity, but if a little arsenic be mixed with it it becomes almost a nonconductor. A little tungsten makes steel very much harder. Lead and antimony are used for making type metal because the alloy has the peculiar property of expanding as it cools.—New York World.

PLANNED TO LASSO A SHIP.

An Old Time Mexican Scheme to Outwit the Americans.

A leaflet from Don Ramon's folk lore may interest you. When war had been declared against Mexico and the arrival of the American hosts was daily expected in southern California, St. Agnes was in a tremor. Of course, not of fear, but of excitement.

One day the news came that a United States vessel of war was approaching the harbor. A council of the ancients of the city was immediately convened and many plans of offensive and defensive action were proposed and discussed, and finally the following one, designed by a Frenchman, whose brother had commanded a crack regiment under the great Napoleon, was adopted:

He was to take his spyglass and the only available artillery that St. Agnes afforded—a small brass cannon, which had been used alternately with anvils to fire salutes during religious and civic processions (I am unable to say how many of a pounder it was)—to the top of the mountain, a distance of twelve miles in a bee line from the ocean beach. In the meanwhile all the expert vaqueros, the moment the vessel was sighted, were to conceal themselves and horses along the beach.

When the ship had anchored and the proper moment, in the judgment of the French commander, had arrived, he was to fire the cannon from the top of the mountain, at which signal the vaqueros were to rush through the surf and lasso the masts of the ship, capsize it into the breakers and harpoon the soldiers and crew as they endeavored to escape to shore. This brilliant coup d'etat was not carried out, only because the ship never came.—From "Romance on El Camino Real," by Jarre T. Richards.

Martin's Way.

Irishmen are inclined to word perversion; but, says a writer, the following description of slow speech, which often degenerated into a stammer, shows that occasionally they use the best words possible in explaining a thing:

You would hardly believe that moles, clumsy and almost blind, become perfect demons when they quarrel. No one knows what they quarrel about, but if they once start fighting one has to die. They will keep on in the presence of any number of spectators, hanging on to one another like bulldogs and burying their enormously strong jaws and teeth in one another's flesh.

THE FLETCHER TRIPLETS

Son and two daughters born June 6th, to Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Fletcher are growing rapidly.

The above picture is a splendid one of the three youngsters born to Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Fletcher, who reside on Mayor Coffey's farm near Beuna Vista.

The son and two daughters, who are now nearing three months of age, are growing rapidly, and are in the very best of health. At birth they weighed 5, 5½ and 6 pounds, the son weighing the least. However, the son, Howard Edman, now weighs 11 pounds and the two daughters, Beatrice Pauline and Anna Lois tip the scales at a few ounces over 10 lbs.

Mr. P. F. Stafford, wife and daughter, have returned to their home in Kokomo, Ind., after a pleasant visit with Mayor Chas. F. Coffey and family.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Early, of Columbus, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Campbell, returned home Wednesday morning.

Miss Hazel Flowers went to Sabina Wednesday to be the guest of Miss Josephine Curtis.

Mrs. Charles Lininger, of the Circleville pike, underwent a serious operation at the Fayette hospital Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Emma Moots also underwent a grave operation.

Messrs. Valentine Hoppes and Jess Creamer, of Jeffersonville, returned from Detroit, Mich., Tuesday evening, driving back a Chalmers master six 1915 model, purchased by Mr. Nathan Creamer and his son. The car is one of the handsomest that the P. F. Ortman Motor Car Co. has delivered this season.

Mrs. Joe Elton came over from Xenia Wednesday called by the death of her sister, Mrs. Alonzo Wilson.

Mr. George Dean left Wednesday for a week's stay in Cincinnati.

Mrs. Wert Heglar, of Peoria, Ill., has joined Mr. Heglar, who is recovering from an auto accident at the home of his mother, Mrs. Maria Heglar, and will remain until he is able to return home.

Mrs. Chris Locke and son, Chris Jr., of Cincinnati, Mrs. Mary Dempsey and daughter, Miss Christine, of Columbus, are the guests of Mrs. Oscar Kellhofer.

The triplets have been attracting widespread attention, and persons for many miles have visited the Fletcher home for the purpose of seeing the youngsters and their proud parents.

Mr. Fletcher recently had photographs taken of the children, and so great has been the call for pictures that he has ordered 100, and has sold most of the number.

Beside the triplets, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher have a son, Robert, who is nearly 10 years of age. Mr. Fletcher is 41 years of age, and Mrs. Fletcher is 30 years old.

Mr. Frank C. Parrett, Republican nominee for representative, was in attendance at the Republican convention at Columbus.

Mr. Frank M. Kennedy was a business visitor in Columbus Tuesday.

MRS. ALONZO WILSON DIES IN HOSPITAL

The sad news was received early Wednesday morning that Mrs. Alonzo Wilson, residing south of town, had answered the eternal summons at 12:30 Tuesday night at Grant hospital, Columbus, just a week and a day after she had undergone an operation of very grave nature.

A resident of this county for 25 years, belonging to a well known family, and herself an exceptionally fine woman, Mrs. Wilson's death brings sorrow to a large circle of friends and relatives, who sympathize deeply with the heart-broken family.

For two years she had been in ill health, but persisted in her usual round of activities until she was compelled to go to the hospital.

Mrs. Wilson was fifty-two years of age and her death is the first in the immediate family during a period of forty years. Her aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. McLaren, of Samatha, are both over eighty years old, and visited her but a short time ago.

The husband and four children, Wilbur, Ruth, Marguerite and Homer are left to mourn a most devoted wife and mother.

Mrs. Wilson will also be greatly missed in the Sugar Grove church, where she was interested in church and Sunday school, and the different church organizations.

Mr. Wilson and one daughter, Miss Ruth, who were with Mrs. Wilson at the hospital, came down from Columbus Wednesday morning and the remains were brought down on the 2:30 afternoon train. They were met by a number of relatives and taken at once to the home.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 2:30 at the Sugar Grove church.

Mrs. Fred Sprenger, of Marion, Ill., was an out-of-town guest.

The W. R. C. will entertain Friday afternoon with a Kensington at the home of Mrs. Clarke Rowe. All the women of the order are cordially invited.

ABILITY IS KEYNOTE.

In building up the production of "Believe Me," the first thing considered was to get a company together from which nothing could be desired in the way of improving it. This proved quite a task, but still going at it with a vim and determination, the management tried this one and then another until they secured just the people they desired. In the upbuilding of the play every person selected was looked to as a specialty artist of known reputation for originality and ability, and as a result of the careful selection, a company has been formed that absolutely stands second to none.

The keynote to their success has been the fact that ability has been the chief requirement throughout. The company's vehicle, "Believe Me," is a clever comedy filled to the brim with pretty music. It will be seen at The Empire on Tuesday, September 1.

ENTRY IN ALLEN DIVORCE CASE

Committee on Resolutions of the Republican Convention Labor For Hours Whipping the Party's Declaration of Principles Into Shape. Proceedings of the Several Conventions at Columbus.

Columbus, Aug. 26.—Ohio Democrats adopted a platform in which the record of achievements of Governor Cox and the Democratic administration are emphasized above everything else. The questions of prohibition and equal suffrage were not touched upon. As to national questions, the Democrats resolved to stand on the record of President Wilson, which was praised in glowing tributes. A call was issued for a national workmen's compensation act, similar to Ohio's law, to protect workmen engaged in interstate commerce.

Standing in bold relief is the endorsement given the Warnes tax law, which is made in the strongest possible terms. Senator Pomerene and Governor Cox aroused enthusiasm when they lauded President Wilson and the Democratic national administration. Campbell, Hogan and other speakers also came in for applause.

The Republican state convention adjourned last night until 10 a. m. to-day after making futile attempts to obtain the presentation of the party platform by the resolutions committee. A disagreement prevailed in the committee on resolutions. It is comprised of representatives from each of the twenty-two congressional districts. From among the members of the committee subcommittees were named, and they started work last evening on the various planks to be incorporated in the platform. The prohibition question proved to be a stumbling block.

Speeches by Chairman Fess, Frank R. Willis and Warren G. Harding were well received.

Ohio Progressives in convention mobilized their forces in support of a strong and radical platform. In that platform, adopted without a dissenting voice by delegates who were the state and legislative candidates, the state and local organizations, the two-year-old party took a stand hand in hand in alliance with three other militant forces, organized temperance, organized women, organized labor.

Addressees by party leaders enthused the delegates.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

Pursuant to law, the Democratic party of Ohio, in state convention assembled, this 25th day of August, 1914, declares and publishes the following platform of principles:

We most earnestly endorse the administration of Woodrow Wilson. We are profoundly grateful for the peace which his wise statesmanship has preserved as while pitiless war strikes terror to the souls of the citizens of nearly every great power of earth. We endorse the peace treaties he has negotiated and respectfully invite all the people of this state without regard to partisanship to join us in this expression of deepest appreciation of his patriotism; this pledge of our loyalty, fidelity and devotion in these trying times and in this message of sympathy to him in the hours of his greatest personal grief.

Respecting widest co-operation, we endorse the splendid record of Hon. Atlee Pomerene and pledge our untiring efforts to the end that Ohio may send to Washington this year another senator to join him and a new congressional delegation, all of whom shall continue to uphold the president and be in and of his administration in both heart and spirit.

With equal earnestness and commendable pride we endorse and approve the wise, energetic and statesmanlike administration of Governor James M. Cox, his executive associates and the general assembly, who have redeemed to the last letter every platform pledge they made to the people, thus establishing a new record of fidelity to a trust.

Two years ago the people of this state, at a nonpartisan election, ordered the first material change in their constitution in over sixty years, by ratifying more than thirty amendments thereto which had been submitted by a constitutional convention, the members of which had also been elected on a nonpartisan ballot. The vote was emphatic. Thus was imposed a duty on the general assembly and executive elected in 1912, to enact and to enforce such laws as would vitalize the people's mandates. In two sessions of the general assembly and on a specific recommendation of the governor in each instance, all the laws necessary to put the people's amendments to their constitution in full force and effect, were enacted. Not a single responsibility was dodged or duty shirked. These laws are Democratic interpretations of the people's will. We stand by each and all of them. We challenge the critics of the opposition to name the law or the laws they would repeal or amend, and, if named, in what respect. Then an issue may be joined.

Believing that the enactments of the last two years constitute a full satisfaction of the demands of the people as expressed by their votes on the constitutional amendments, we pledge the general assembly which is to be elected in November of this year to the briefest possible session and to the consideration of such matters only as are of general community interest.

The work of the last brief session of the general assembly, which consisted of cutting the state tax levy more than 50 per cent, thus reducing the same to the lowest point in Ohio's history, will not excite the criticism of any honest citizen. This result was made possible by the enactment of a new tax law which simply introduced a business principle into the matter of listing property for taxation. The general lightening of the burdens of all honest taxpayers is the law's vindication. It will produce even better and more equitable results next year than this.

We urge upon the national congress the enactment of a workmen's compensation law similar to that in force in this state, to the end that those of our laborers employed in interstate commerce may enjoy the same protection that their fellow employees in Ohio now enjoy.

PROGRESSIVE PLATFORM

Free from factional strife and from the intrigues of bipartisan bossism, unfettered by the influence of special interests, the Progressives of Ohio rededicate themselves to the cause of equal and exact justice for all.

Reaffirming those great principles of human welfare and popular government which are embodied in the contract with the people set forth at Chicago in 1912, have made the Progressive party a party that will live and triumph, we again declare our conviction that by reason of their corrupt bosses and inept leadership both the Democratic and Republican organizations in the state and nation have proved themselves unfit for the control of governmental affairs.

We believe that present business conditions reveal a vital weakness in our national commercial and industrial policy. We urge the adoption of a legitimate protective tariff, scientifically provided by a permanent commission armed with full authority; we urge measures that will permit American labor and capital to develop an American merchant marine that will win back the markets of the world; we demand the overthrow of the foolish academic policy that offers millions of blackmail to a Central American state.

We denounce the administration of Governor Cox as destructive of popular government. We charge that he has used executive power for mere personal advantage and under the guise of efficiency attacked the principle of home rule and built up a sinister personal political machine. We charge that he is the champion of the breweries and is seeking to destroy the temperance laws of the state at the behest of the liquor interests with which he is politically allied.

We pledge our party to the support of county home rule in taxation and an equitable adjustment of taxes on mortgaged real estate to avoid double taxation; an exemption of $500 of personal property for each person; to nonpartisan municipal and county elections; to the maintenance and simplification of the primary and election laws; to abolition of party nominations for judicial offices and the boards of education; the merit system in the public service; the construction and maintenance of main market roads, intercounty highways, county and township roads; the right of counties to adopt the commission form of government; the speedy completion of the Ohio river improvement project; the division of counties and senatorial districts where there are more than one representative into single legislative districts; to legislation to prevent the abuse of the emergency clause on propositions subject to the referendum; to eight hours' work and a minimum wage for women; one day's rest in seven for all wage workers; the extension of safety laws in the operation of railway trains with a view to further protection of employees and travelers; the enforcement and perfection of the system of workmen's compensation, and to the strict enforcement of all existing laws.

Believing that the United States can not justly claim to be a true democracy while it denies political rights on account of sex, we pledge our support to the constitutional amendment granting suffrage to the women of Ohio.

The traffic in intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes is a great moral and political wrong and an economic waste. We denounce and oppose the so-called home rule amendment to the constitution submitted by the liquor interests; we pledge our party to the adoption of the statewide prohibition amendment initiated by the temperance people; and until prohibition is adopted we pledge our party to the maintenance and strict enforcement of the local option laws.

An amendment to the federal constitution providing national prohibition of the liquor traffic, the enactment of statutory laws in support thereof and the strict enforcement of the laws enacted; and we charge both the Republican and Democratic parties in Ohio with complete subservience to the brewers.

CLAYTON DIES AT 90 YEARS

Washington, Aug. 26.—General Powell Clayton, who for fifty years has been a figure in national politics as a Republican, died at his apartments in the Highlands after a long illness. He was ninety years old and a native of Pennsylvania. He served in the civil war as an officer, first as a captain of infantry. He was gradually promoted until he came out of the service as a brigadier general at the close of the war. Following the war he settled on a plantation near Pine Bluff, Ark., and from that day until he ceased his activities in national politics he was recognized as the leader of the Republican party in that state. He was governor of Arkansas from 1868 to 1871 and then served as United States senator until 1877.

The ex-governor forced the Bull Moose leader to listen to him for three hours, and Colonel Roosevelt admitted later that it had been a most interesting discussion.

MINERS SORE ON DECISION

Denver, Aug. 26.—After a delay of eighty-eight days Governor Ammons made public the findings of the court-martial that tried twenty-one officers and enlisted men of the Colorado National Guard on charges of murder, manslaughter, arson, robbery and assault, growing out of the destruction April 20 of the Ludlow tent colony, in which three miners, thirteen women and children and two millmen were killed. The court-martial verdict, a complete vindication of the accused men, is approved in full by the governor.

The United Mine Workers will go into the civil courts and ask that the entire court-martial proceedings be declared illegal and the soldiers brought to trial on charges of murder and arson.

Unabashed.

Years ago Isidore de Lara used to sing his own songs at concerts to his own accompaniment. The most popular of them was "The Garden of Sleep." Once—so runs the story—Mr. de Lara was "Garden of Sleeping" at a private house, and he was immensely annoyed by George Moore, who went on insistently talking after the song had begun. Mr. de Lara sang a few bars and then sprang indignantly to his feet.

"Mr. Moore," he said, "I was singing the other day before the Prince of Wales, and he spoke, and I stopped."
"Well, my dear chap," replied Mr. Moore calmly, "he survives."

Mr. de Lara had humor enough to join in the general laugh.—London Answers.

Spartanburg, S. C., Aug. 26.—Returns of the primary election indicate that Governor Blease has been defeated for the senatorial nomination by Senator Ellison D. Smith by at least 10,000 majority.

What He Left

Residing in a little village is a lawyer who is famous for drawing wills in which branch of business he has long enjoyed a monopoly of the country for miles around.

A few months since a wealthy man died. There was much speculation as to the value of the property, and the town gossip set about to find out the facts. He hunted up the lawyer, and, after a few preliminary remarks about the deceased, he said rather bluntly: "I suppose you made Brown's will?"

"Yes."
"Then you probably know how much he left. Would you mind telling me?"
"Not at all," the lawyer answered, as he resumed his writing. "He left everything he had."

Did His Share.

The lecturer raised his voice with emphatic confidence.
"It is my belief, and I venture to assert it," he declared, "that there isn't a man in this audience who has ever done anything to prevent the destruction of our vast forests."

A rather timid, henpecked looking man quietly arose in the rear of the hall and said:
"I—er—I've shot woodpeckers!"—Everybody's.

An Idyl.

"He is my ideal and I'm his idol," said the girl.
"And your love affair?"
"Is an idyl."
"And your fiancé?"
"He's idle, according to papa."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Pretty Rich.

Louise—Are they rich enough to afford competent servants? Julia—My dear! They're rich enough to afford dishonest ones.—Life.

Bravery of a Boy.

"One of the bravest acts I witnessed during the whole war," said an officer of the Army of Northern Virginia, "was that of a young soldier who was probably not over sixteen. We had thought of him as only a boy, although he went with the regiment on all of its marches and lived with it in all its encampments."

"One day there was a fierce engagement. In the midst of it a bullet struck this boy in the breast, and he fell. Our colonel ordered his men to dismount, and as he himself sprang from his horse, the boy called out in a weak voice, 'I will hold your horse, colonel!'"

"Stopping in the midst of the storm of bullets to gaze in pity on the white, boyish face, the colonel said, 'But you can't do that, lad—you are dying!'"

"I know I am, colonel," the gallant boy replied. "But I can hold the reins when I am dead!"

"The colonel placed the bridle in the trembling hands and went forward. When the fight was over he hurried back and found the boy lying dead, the bridle reins still wrapped tightly round his limp right hand."—Youth's Companion.

Queer Story of a Grave.

A curious barren mound is to be seen in Montgomery churchyard. Whatever the cause, there is plainly to be seen a strip of sterility in the form of a cross among a mass of verdure. With the mound a melancholy legend is connected. It is called "Robert's Grave," and the story is that beneath this barren hillock lie the remains of an innocent man who was hanged on mistaken evidence. It is said that while the man stood on the gallows with the rope round his neck he solemnly declared, as a proof of his innocence, that grass should never grow on his grave. And even so it was and is. Any one who attempts to frustrate the fulfillment of this prophecy by sowing grass on this spot pays the penalty with his life. Instances are given of individuals who have been rash enough to do so and have met their doom soon afterward.—Cardiff Western Mail.

CLOSES PORT OF VERA CRUZ

Carranza's Order Working Great Hardships.

FRESH REVOLT IN MEXICO

Discharged Federal Soldiers Reported to Be Threatening Trouble at Several Points—Falsely Informed That the American Army Will Care For Them—Problem Perplexing General Funston.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Aug. 26.—Great hardships have been worked here by General Carranza's order closing this port. A similar decree issued by General Huerta following his occupation of the palace was never enforced.

A general revolt among federal soldiers seems to have broken out in various parts of the country. Word has reached here that 8,000 of them under General Ortega revolted at Salina Cruz, on the west coast, and news of revolts in other places is constantly arriving.

Nothing is known here about General Villa's movements and considerable apprehension is felt that a new and general outbreak is in process of beginning.

The federal troops who have been mustered out are thronging into Vera Cruz. They have been falsely instructed by their officers, also mustered out, that the United States army will care for them. All of them have been paid in money that General Carranza has decreed worthless. As a result many of them are penniless and not a few are on the verge of starvation.

General Funston will have to face this situation. As yet he has announced no plans. It is generally recognized, however, that the problem is a serious one and may cause trouble.

UNDER A VOLCANO

A Town That Lives In Perennial Dread of Extinction.

COLIMA'S CRATER IN ACTION.

It's a Solemn Spectacle For the Dwellers In the Shadow of the Gloomy Peak When "Old Faithful" Explodes, as It Does Regularly Once a Year.

It is singular how indifferent to a persistently threatened danger human beings can become, even when the danger is of a deadly nature and may imperil their very lives. Hargy H. Dunn, in the Montreal Herald and Star, tells of a case in which a whole townful of people lie under the constant threat of extinction by a volcano.

The roof of the little boxlike hotel in Colima, capital of the state of Colima, in Mexico, was freshly drenched with water in a vain effort to fight off some of September's heat. I think there were eighteen of us gathered there in the cool, gray night. The almost silent town lay like a black and white check-board at our feet.

Twenty miles away, across a valley still green with the rains of summer, rose a conical mountain, almost solitary. Even by night it looked sinister; by day it was terrible, with its barren, lava coated sides, its gas exuding cone shunned even by the vultures which haunted mountain and plain. It was the volcano of Colima, the "Old Faithful" of craters, which explodes regularly once a year—and it was almost due for an exhibition.

"He should begin soon," droned the hotel keeper. "Maybe today, maybe tomorrow, maybe not for a week, but it is the middle of September, and it is his time."

The old man had scarcely finished when a bubble, black as night, crowded itself out of the broken end of the mountain, which we knew was a pot of molten stone, twenty miles away. The bubble, so dark that we could see it plainly, swelled like a growing puffball and then, pushed out from below, rose like a giant umbrella, with incredible speed, into the sky. Behind it came a straight tubular column of smoke, such smoke as that of which the bubble was made, black and thick and ominous.

Up, up, up, rose the bubble, riding, it seemed, on the column below it. It appeared to hang like a huge blanket a thousand feet in the heavens; then slowly, like some great octopus feeling its way along the bed of the sea, the bubble flattened and began to spread out. Probably it moved miles every minute, but it was far away and so monstrous that we could not judge it by ordinary standards.

It seemed that the town below us heaved a long sigh. The thing for which its ten or twelve thousand inhabitants had been waiting was about to happen. The mighty drama was about to be enacted before their eyes, as it was before the Spanish conquistadores set foot on Mexican soil. Yet to them the spectacle was ever exciting, for its end might be death, might be destruction of their town, as it had been the destruction of the many smaller towns clustered more closely round the skirts of the gloomy peak.

The roofs filled with people. Here and there a woman screamed; many, both men and women, prayed; querulous cries and questions from children rose on the night air, and the bells in the churches began to ring, slowly at first and then more rapidly, as the fire god began to play about the crest of Colima.

Like a waterspout on the crest of a lofty roller at sea, the smoke column and its spreading top rested for a moment on the volcano and then, with a thunderous outrush of air, which must have been heard for at least a hundred miles, vanished into thin air. A column of fire took their place.

No ordinary fire was this. No flame ever kindled by human hands burned so white as that tower of luminous bits of lava and sand and stone and superheated gases that shot upward from the mouth of the crater.

I gazed at it spellbound as the light of day spread round all over the valley and the city. A constant roar came from the volcano, a roar so insistent, so monotonous, that I could not hear what the old hotel keeper who stood at my elbow was saying. I bent my ear to him and heard: "Not so bad as last year. Mayhap we shall not be harmed."

PLANT PUZZLES.

What, For Instance, Guides the Vine In Finding Its Support?

A plant that actually goes insect hunting is among the latest of the scientific discoveries. It is known as the sundew. Its leaves, covered with tentacles, close in upon a fly the moment it touches them and slowly strangle it. This has long been familiar to the naturalist, but it now develops that the plant does not passively wait for its prey. If a fly alights within a half inch of one of the leaves it slowly approaches the insect until close enough to lay hold and destroy, thus demonstrating the possession of some sort of sense or instinct with which plants are not usually supposed to be endowed.

Something of the same sort is manifested in that plant parasite, the dodder. It germinates from seed, sending out a thin, threadlike growth, which winds in and out among the grass stalks until it finally approaches its natural victim. Then its growth is greatly accelerated. In a sense it fairly leaps upon its host and once there not only fastens to it, but multiplies with surprising rapidity.

If a stake be driven within a few inches of a growing sweet pea vine it will be observed that a tendrill drops from a leaf of the plant in the direction of the stake. Forthwith the whole upper shoot of the vine bends in the same direction, and very soon the tendrill is able to fasten itself. The same observation holds more or less true with all climbing plants.

Vegetation of various kinds sends roots through distances, sometimes to be measured in yards, that they may reach soil or water below. Science is asking if the sundew knows that the fly is near.

Has the vine a method of detecting the proximity of its support? Does the plant so situated that its nourishment is lacking realize that far below it are earth and water?

An affirmative answer involves the admission of a sense or instinct in vegetation that corresponds to that in animal life, and yet those who have studied the matter most profoundly give that very answer.—Exchange.

Too Modest.

Sir W. S. Gilbert's own story of his first experience as a playwright is instructive. He took his maiden attempt to a manager, who read it carefully and offered to accept it. "Now," said he to the overjoyed dramatist, "what do you expect me to pay you for this?" The young author, not liking to be too forward, modestly suggested 20 guineas. The manager immediately wrote out a check for the desired amount and, presenting it to Gilbert, said: "Young man, let me give you a word of advice. Never sell so good a play for such a small amount again."

A Curious Trial.

The records of Kirby Matzeard church in Yorkshire, England, mention a curious trial which took place in the church in the seventeenth century. A woman was tried for stealing a skull out of the churchyard. Her defense was that she took the skull to put under the pillow of a sleepless friend as a charm to make her sleep. She was reprimanded and ordered to put the skull back.

BOATS OF THE ANCIENTS.

Floating Palaces Used by the Old Greeks and Romans.

It is generally agreed that Noah's ark measured about 450 feet in length, seventy-five feet in breadth and forty-five in depth. It is interesting to note that the proportions of these dimensions are practically the same as those of the great modern ocean liners.

The Greeks and Romans constructed several large vessels measuring upward of 500 feet. These were built for the emperors or rulers and were little more than enormous scows, without any means of propulsion. Upon these were erected elaborate cabin accommodations, and even gardens were planted. A Roman bath was installed on one of these boats.

A vessel 420 feet in length was built by Ptolemy which was propelled by 500 rowers, arranged in five banks, using oars fifty-seven feet in length. The boat is recorded to have developed considerable speed.

The fame of the Thalamagus still lives. This boat, which measured 300 feet in length, forty feet in breadth and sixty in depth, was said to have been the most beautiful craft in antiquity and was used exclusively by the emperor.

A king of Syracuse is also credited with having built a very palatial boat, whose cabins were hung with costly silks and decorated with rare statues. After the decline of the Roman empire no great ships were constructed for more than 1,000 years.

The biggest modern ship, the Vaterland, measures 950 feet, thus approximately fulfilling the tradition that ships would come to be 1,000 feet long. —Boston Herald.

Highland English.

English as she is spoke in the remote highlands is not exactly the tongue of the south, which fact is illustrated by a brief conversation which took place between three highland ghillies who had a sup each of the laird's own mountain dew. Says Tougai, "That was the fery pest whusky her naimesl nefer tasted in all her pora tays." As-sented Tonalit, "So did I neither." And Angus corroborated, "Neither did I too."—London Globe.

Coming Into Her Own.

Woman is certainly coming into her own. Even in tender romance she is exerting an influence.

The young man had just been accepted. In his rapture he exclaimed, "But do you think, my love, I am good enough for you?"

His strong minded fiancée looked sternly at him for a moment and replied: "Good enough for me? You've got to be!"—Judge.

TOWER OF LONDON.

It Once Had a Menagerie With a Murderous Orang Outang.

It is not generally known that until the year 1834 there was a menagerie of wild beasts in the Tower of London. In his book, "London Survivals," the Rev. P. H. Ditchfield writes:

"A word or two may be said about this collection of beasts. It commenced with the present of three leopards from the Emperor Frederick to Henry III.—an appropriate gift, as our sovereign bore three of these animals on his shield of arms, and then a white bear was added, for which the sheriffs of London were ordered to provide a muzzle and an iron chain to secure him when out of the water and a long, stout cord to hold him when fishing in the Thames. We fear his successors at the zoological gardens do not enjoy the like diversion. Then came an elephant. In the time of Edward II. there was a lion, for which the sheriffs, who must have deemed these creatures troublesome beasts, had to provide daily a quarter of mutton.

"Paul Hentzner saw here in 1598 three lionesses, a lion of great size—called Edward VI. from his having been born in that reign—a tiger, a lynx, a wolf, 'exceedingly old,' a porcupine and an eagle. James I. often visited the menagerie and used to enjoy baiting the lion with dogs or seeing a fight between a bear and a lion. In 1754 there were two 'man tygers'—orang-outangs—one of which killed a boy by throwing a cannon ball at him."

SERVIAN INFANTRY MARCHING TO THE FRONTIER

TERRIFIC BATTLE FOUGHT COMPANY M TAKING PART

After the first terrific battle, in which the loss (in ammunition) on both sides was very heavy, the Fourth regiment succeeded in pitching camp at Maple Grove at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, with practically every man in good health and everything moving according to schedule.

Every member of Company M is enjoying the camp life immensely, and all are well. Tonight the small shelter tents again will be used, with the larger tents being placed in readiness as fast as they arrive.

It was while about one mile from camp that the engagement occurred, and for some little time the hills resounded with the crackle and roar of musketry as the invaders were repulsed with great loss.

Camp was broken on the Entekin farm near Frankfort at an early hour Wednesday morning, and the men had splendid conditions for making the tramp of eight miles to the final camp at Maple Grove.

Another engagement will take place some time Thursday, with a third Friday.

Many persons from this city will go down to Maple Grove during the week, and a record-breaking crowd is expected for Sunday.

CAROLINA VOTE POURING IN

By Associated Press.

Columbia, S. C., August 26.—Additional but incomplete reports today from all counties in the Democratic senatorial primary, give Governor Cole L. Blease 48,000 and Senator E. D. Smith 65,000, out of 117,000 votes, reported. The returns seem to show Smith maintaining a majority sufficient to renominate him over his three opponents. In the race for Governor, Robert A. Cooper held a majority of about 6,000 votes over Richard I. Manning his nearest opponent.

HEIGHT OF WAVES.

In Severe Storms the Crests May Mount Fifty Feet.

It is only in the imagination of the poets that waves rise "mountain high." The exact altitude and length of waves have been measured with scientific accuracy, and the record waves are carefully recorded. Waves in shallow water are, as a rule, higher than those in open or deep water. The height of a wave is commonly about one-fifteenth its length.

The longest wave on record was 2,500 feet, measuring from crest to crest, its period being about twenty-two seconds. Waves of extreme length are seldom very high. A wave 2,500 feet in length, rising in deep water, will have a height of about fifty feet.

When a wave enters shallow water its crest becomes considerably higher, and one of a height of forty feet will frequently rise to fifty feet. If it meets resistance, it may be thrown up twice this height.

In severe storms at sea waves rarely reach a height of fifty feet. The average in such time has a period of about ten seconds, which would indicate a length of about 500 feet. Waves with a period of ten seconds have a length of from 150 to 300 feet and a height of thirty-three feet and form a very high sea.—Exchange.

Stevenson's Retort.

An interesting letter is Stevenson's in reply to an autograph hunter who had spelled his name with a "ph" instead of a "v."

"The few lines with which you have found time to honor me," he replied, "contain certain indications of your character on which I take pleasure in dwelling. They show you so illiterate that I cannot judge your admiration flattering. They show you so careless of giving trouble to me that I am myself careless how much offense I may convey to you, and they are so ill penned that I am tempted to hope you will discover a difficulty in perusing my answer and place it unread in your collection. The next time it shall occur to you to trouble an author, as you have troubled me find out—I do not say what he has written; far less would I suggest that you should read it—but find out how he is in the habit of spelling his unpretentious name and give him upon that point the flattery of imitation."—Chicago Herald.

Making Shot.

Even among sportsmen there are probably many people who are not acquainted with the manner in which shot is made. The process is carried out at what is known as a shot tower. This is a tall tower of metal or stone with a tank at the top filled with molten lead. The bottom of this tank is perforated with holes, and there is a slide underneath it, also perforated. This slide is pulled from side to side, and every time two holes come opposite each other a small quantity of molten lead falls through. As these drops fall through the air they assume a globular shape, and if the tower is of sufficient length they solidify before reaching the bottom. Here they fall into a tank of cold water and are cooled. When the shot has to be small the slide is worked more quickly than when it has to be larger.—Pearson's Weekly.

Medical Mem.

"What a little, frail looking man your family doctor is!"
"He may appear so, but he really is a man of powerful fee seek."—Baltimore American.

FOUND DEAD

By Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, August 26.—Police today are endeavoring to identify the well dressed middle-aged man who fell 150 feet over a cliff to a horrible death in the Cuyahoga falls last night. They are also endeavoring to find the well dressed woman who was with him when he took the fatal plunge. Charles Brown, who was fishing on the bank of the river near the falls last night heard a woman's scream followed almost instantly by the thud of a body. He ran to the spot and found the man dead and horribly mangled.

Building a Fire.

In building a wood fire in an open fireplace shake out a double sheet of newspaper and crush it tightly, leaving the edges loose, that it may ignite easily. The back log should be of the greatest size that the fireplace will hold and may be of green wood, as this is the slowest to burn out, and the draft and fire are strongest in the back. The log should be shoved against the wall. If it is a split log the inside of it should be turned toward the front. Three logs are a good number to start a fire with—the back log, a smaller one in front and the third log on top of these. All of the ashes of the first three or four should be left on the hearth, as they make a fine bed for keeping the embers hot after they have fallen through the andirons. The wood should be mixed in order to have an ideal fire—green wood with dry, and the harder varieties, oak and pine, with the wood of old fruit trees that have died. Apple wood gives a mellow, soft light.—New York Sun.

Connecticut Taverns of 1644.

Taverns came early, and under order of the general court in 1644 they were established "not only in Hartford, but others in each town upon our river." An old authority tells what a guest might expect:

"Clean sheets to lie in wherein no man had been lodged since they came from the landress and have a servant to kindle his fire and one to pull off his boots and make them clean and have the hostess and hostess to visit him and to eat with the hostess or at a common table if he pleases or eat in his chamber, commanding what meate he will, according to his appetite. Yea, the kitchen being open to him to order the meat to be dressed as he liketh it best."

The landlord was not to allow a person to be intoxicated in his house or to drink excessively or to tattle after 9 o'clock at night.—"A History of Connecticut," by George L. Clark.

The Sneeze.

People say "God bless me" after sneezing, from the fact that in the days of the plague this terrible malady began with violent sneezing and other indications of cold. The exclamation was thus originally a prayer to be delivered from the plague.

Her Initiative.

"Mr. Wilgus tried to kiss me last evening."
"How dared he?"
"He didn't; I dared him."—Pittsburgh Press.

HOME WATERMELONS ARE ON THE MARKET

With the advent of home grown watermelons on the market the price of this commodity comes within easy reach of the purse of everyone. There is little possibility of their getting very low in price this season because of their scarcity.

Home grown melons have been on the local market for several days and are of excellent quality considering the general run of melons this season. They have dropped from their exclusive position in the larders of monarchs and mighty men and can now be bought at retail at from 25c to 35c.

Melons from the vicinity of Mt. Sterling are being marketed here and are of good quality.

TOURISTS PASS THROUGH CITY

Gene Stewart, Gus Brunner, Perce Hubbard and Clifford Mohler, of Portsmouth, passed through this city Wednesday morning on their way home after a tour covering parts of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

The men were in a Buick touring car, and the car was covered with pennants from nearly every city of importance through which they had passed.

Little trouble was encountered on a journey of 2600 miles. The men stopped at the postoffice in this city, and left for Chillicothe after a few minutes stop.

GET SCHOLARSHIPS IN STATE SCHOOL

Roy C. Vivens, George Jackson and

Ona Roberts, colored youths who graduated from Washington High school for 1914, have, upon the recommendation of Prof. Wm. McClain, superintendent, and Prof. O. K. Probasco, principal, been offered scholarships in the State Normal and Industrial department at Wilberforce university, Wilberforce, O.

It is little known that the State of Ohio contributes to the maintenance and operation of this institution, and that the school is the oldest negro school in the country, dating its history back to 1844.

Each senator and representative has the prerogative of designating one or more youths each year from his district for scholarships.
